WOMAN, GIRL, CAPTAIN DIE IN FLAMES

Fire Official's Body Is Found With the Child He Tried to Save Dead in His Arms

Capt. Florence Sullivan of Engine 32, Charlestown, lost his life with a woman and girl he tried to save when flames roared through a lodging house at 568 Columbus ave., South End, early today, spreading to 570, next door.

The other victims were Mrs. Nellie Woodward and her 11-year-old daughter, Beatrice, who lived on the second floor of the four-story building, where the charred bodies were found.

Five persons were burned or suffered from smoke inhalation, and numerous others were rescued or fled to the street in night clothing with the thermometer registering 27 above.

Those taken to City Hospital were:

Arthur Strand, 570 Columbus ave., second degree burns.

Mrs. Rose Strand, his wife, burns on head, face and arms.

Miss Hattie Craig, 568 Columbus ave., burns on face and arms, inhalation.

Mrs. Louise Fall, widow, 65, of 570 Columbus ave., burns and inhalation.

Byrd Feat 'Marvel of Age'

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Washington today marveled at Commander Richard E. Byrd's hazardous and successful flight over the ice waste lands of the South Pole and extolled the courage and adventurous enthusiasm of the still youthful explorer.

From all sides came expressions of amazement at the extraordinary success of the exploit, praise for the valor of Commander Byrd and his associates and optimistic predictions of the scientific value of the flight.

President Hoover lost no time in transmitting his congratulations to Byrd, far away at his base in Little America. Through the New York Times, the chief executive sent a radio message telling the leader of the expedition of the "universal pleasure" of the American people that his goal had been reached.

"We are proud of your courage and your leadership," Mr. Hoover said. "We are glad of proof that the spirit of great adventure still lives. Our thoughts of appreciation include also your companions in the flight and your colleagues whose careful and devoted preparation have contributed to your great success."

Meanwhile, some thought was given to possible international complications that may arise over the question of national title to the lands over which Commander Byrd flew.

Great Britain claims much territory in the Antarctic region, on the ground of previous discovery and exploration.

When the present expedition was still in the making the London government dispatched a note to the United States telling of its interest

New York, Nov. 30 (INS)—Eighty-five thousand frozen souls watched in numbed misery this afternoon while the unbeaten Notre Dame team made its last and supreme bid for football immortality.

Both teams went scoreless in the first period, but early in the second period Elder of Notre Dame ran 99 yards for a touchdown. The goal was then kicked. The score at the end of the first half was 7 to 0.

The bid was made against a fighting Army team in one of the great classics of the gridiron and never a colder one was played.

The mercury almost sank out of sight in its chase, the field was frozen as hard as a corrugated roof and a fitful breakish wind bothered the players and almost ruined the spectators. Yet so attractive was this finale of the eastern season that man fought for tickets even as their hands fumbled with the important money that paid for them. And $50 for a ticket on the 60-yard line, a dollar for every yard, was supposed to be the price with the speculators.

The town, in fact, was Notre Dame crazy. It was mad about this Irish team that had beaten Indiana, Wisconsin, Georgia Tech, Navy, Carnegie Tech, Drake, Southern California and Northwestern on successive Saturdays and asked only that it repeat against the Army today. Always a local favorite with its color and fight, the Army had to take second money in the matter of public sympathy today.

STAR IS OUT, TOO.

Part of this sympathy was engendered by the realization that victory meant so much to Notre Dame and so little to the Army, already discredited through defeats by Yale and Illinois.

The rest of the public's regard was fostered by the fact that Knute Rockne, the father of Notre Dame football, was not here to see his boys make their last play for the championship. Ill at home,

Fenway Park, Nov. 30—Boston College and Holy Cross fought on the frost-hardened Fenway Park gridiron today for the Arctic championship of the world or something. Some 30,000 fans shivered in the stands as the athletes fought it out on the iron surface of the ball park.

The score at the end of the first half was 6 to 0.

Thousands of spectators were kept away by the cold, but those present had plenty of football enthusiasm, the wild unreasoning kind that the clash of these rivals always produces.

The players went through the preliminaries bundled in sweaters with hand protected by heavy gloves. There was a northwest gale whipping over the field, giving the team that had the wind a great advantage. There was the usual parading and cheering before the game, although the biting cold took the edge off slightly.

The crowds enjoyed the evolutions of the rival bands, even though the musical programs held up the start of the game some 10 minutes.

FIRST PERIOD

Capt. Creeden won the toss and elected to kick off. Holy Cross defended the grandstand goal. Murphy kicked off to O'Connell, who ran it back to his own 35-yard line. Manfreda and Clancy made five yards between them. Dixon tossed Clancy for four yards loss. Clancy kicked to B. C.'s 45-yard line, where the ball was downed. Gannon nailed Antos for a five-yard loss. Creeden was stopped by Dixon punted straight up in the air and Manfreda took the ball on his own 45-yard line.

B. C. lost 15 yards on the next play. Manfreda lost a yard. Downes knocked down O'Connell's pass. Clancy punted over the B. C. goal line, B. C.'s ball first down on their own 20-yard line.

O'CONNELL LOSES 5 YARDS

Antos and Kelley made three yards. Dixon punted to Holy Cross 45-yard line where Murphy downed the ball. Dixon tossed O'Connell for 5-yard loss.

Clancy made two yards. O'Connell passed to Alzerini, who made a nifty catch on B. C.'s 28-yard line. Downes tossed Manfreda for a four-yard loss. O'Connell hit a stone wall at center. Dixon caught O'Connell before he could get off a pass for a 15-yard loss. Clancy punted off-side on B. C.'s 18-yard line.

Antos fumbled and Finn of H. C. recovered on B. C.'s 22-yard line. O'Connell added three yards. Murphy pushed Manfreda outside for a 5-yard loss. Dougherty replaced Manfreda in H. C. back field. An O'Connell to Alzerini pass was grounded. Dougherty tried a placement kick from the B. C. 30-yard line, but failed. B. C.'s ball on 20-yard line.

B. C. LOSES 5 YARDS.

Creedon made 2 yards, but B. C. was offside and penalized 5 yards.

Creedon failed to gain at center. Gannon threw Antos for an 8-yard loss. Dixon punted from his own goal line to H. C.'s 42-yard line where Downes grounded the ball.

O'Connell made 3 yards at right tackle. Clancy failed to gain at other side of the line. Clancy failed to gain on a fake kick as the period ended.

Score—H. C. 0, B. C. 0.

SECOND PERIOD

B. C. was penalized 5 yards for offside. Dougherty made 3 yards at left tackle and it was first down for H. C. on their own 48-yard line.

The ball was called back. B. C. penalized 5 yards, giving H. C. first down on their 48-yard line. Finn lost 7 yards. O'Connell went to B. C. 35-yard line. Baker made 7 yards at center. Clancy made 2 and first down on B. C. 26-yard line. O'Connell lost two yards.

Two passes gave Holy Cross first down on B. C.'s 11-yard line. O'Connell fumbled and Downes recovered. Dixon punted from the end zone to the B. C. 28-yard line. Downes intercepted a flat pass over the center of the line, giving B. C. the ball on their 26-yard line. Two plays failed. Dixon kicked outside on his own 46-yard line. O'Connell lost 10 yards. Clancy kicked from his 40-yard line over the B. C. line. B. C. made six yards in two plays. End of period: Boston College 6, Holy Cross 0.

FOURTH PERIOD—Dixon punted. First down for H. C. on their 38-yard line. H. C. made 10 yards. Three plays failed. Clancy punted to B. C. 17-yard line. Two plays failed. Dixon punted. H. C.'s ball on their 40-yard line. H. C. could not gain. Clancy punted to B. C. 41 yard line.

B. C. intercepted a pass and scored a touchdown near the close of the period. Herman failed at goal.

TWO HUB SHIPS IN DISTRESS

Two Boston bound ships were reported in distress today, while others struggled through heavy seas and fishermen stayed out on the banks with little chance for favorable catches.

The steamer Otho, bound here from African ports for Rogers & Webb, was reported in distress shortly after the start of her trip from the port of Dakar, Africa. She was taken in tow by a French navy vessel.

The steamer Wind Rush, bound here from Pacific coast ports, ran ashore at Possession Point, near Seattle, Wash. Although she was floated without assistance, her arrival here to the Shepard S. S. Co. will be delayed.

The passenger steamer Yarmouth, bucked heavy seas all the way from Yarmouth, N. S., arriving three hours behind schedule.

The schooner Mary B. Brooks, from the same port, was a mass of ice as she was towed up the harbor to House 45, Little Mystic river. She had encountered head winds and nasty seas all the way.

But three vessels reported at the Fish Pier today, the others being caught on the fishing banks with small catches and willing to ride out the weather in the hopes of more before pulling in to port.

A temperature of 2 above zero was reported by the fishermen at the banks.

Golden Rule Plant Keeps Up Wages

James M. "Golden Rule" Daly today notified President Hoover that he would operate his Lynn and Beverly shoe factories without profit for the next six months rather than reduce the wages of his employes during that period.

Mr. Daly said that he had guaranteed the "no wage reduction" to his employes as his part in aiding the country in the program of business stimulation as urged by President Hoover.

NAVY TACKLES DARTMOUTH

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, Nov. 30—A respectable Navy team, seeking one major win for the season, clashed with a strong Dartmouth eleven here today. Despite the cold it didn't take the boys long to get under way, once the kicking off formalities were attended to.

Just before the game started the midshipmen, 2000 strong, paraded on the field as only the Navy can.

Anyone doubting how cold it was in this stadium, had only to look at the Navy goat, shivering in the foreground, despite his heavy overcoat.

FIRST PERIOD

Navy got a break at the start of the game when Gabrey caught Baiers' kickoff on Dartmouth's 3-yard line, giving Navy possession of the ball. Dartmouth held for downs, however, when Spring's forward passes failed and Booma kicked to Navy's 20-yard line. Navy ground out a few yards with Kirn carrying the ball. Kirn added another first down, Johnson replaced Sutton. Bowstrum punted to Dartmouth's 20-yard line.

Morton kicked to Navy's 39-yard line. Navy pounded out a first down with Spring and Kirn carrying the ball. Kirn fumbled and Armstrong recovered on Navy's 20-yard line. Dartmouth lost the ball

Woman Wins on 3400 to 1 Shot

London, Nov. 30 (INS)—Coole, a 3400 to 1 shot, romped home to win the 2:30 race at Haydock Park today and paid a timid little woman backer, the only person who had placed a bet on him, £331, or about $1522, for a modest 2-shilling (50-cent) bet.

Coole was such a rank outsider that other bettors who swarmed to the "totalizator" betting machines in use at British race tracks, backing Coole's competitors, ran the actual odds up to 3410 to 1.

The woman bet a total of $1 on Coole, 2 shillings to win; 2 shillings to lose.

BOSTON FIRE CAPTAIN GIVES LIFE IN VAIN EFFORT TO SAVE CHILD

3 KILLED IN SOUTH END BLAZE

Richard Gibson, 588 Columbus ave., inhalation.

Little hope is held out for the recovery of Mr. and Mrs. Strand. Their names are on the danger list.

Gibson was discharged from the hospital late today and Mrs. Fell and Miss Craig are recovering.

GIRL HEROINE.

Catherine Roche of 588 Columbus ave. rescued Gladys Brothers from the top floor of 588 by dragging her across a coping to safety.

Ann Foley and Doris Stanley, who lived on the third floor of 588 Columbus ave., were shivering on the fire escape, clad only in filmy nightdresses, when reached by firemen and taken to the street.

Lieut. Stephen Gillis and members of the Headquarters Flying Squadron arrived shortly after the firemen and aroused occupants of 570 Columbus ave. and adjacent buildings.

Police and fire department investigations were launched to determine the cause of the blaze, which did damage estimated at $8000. The burned building was the property of the Delano Hat Co., and was leased to George Proctor, lodging house proprietor.

TWO ALARMS SOUNDED

The bodies of Mrs. Woodward and her daughter were identified by her son, Randolph, who told police the three had come to Boston from Kingsbomb, Me., only three weeks ago.

The boy said his father, a Spanish War veteran, was dead, and his mother had been living on a pension. Randolph recently obtained work in a newsstand in North Station.

The fire marshal's office entered the investigation when a report was made that two persons had heard an explosion at the time the blaze was discovered. This report was made to police of Station 6, who turned it over to state authorities.

A pathetic feature of the fire was the fact that three persons, one of them a woman, lost all their possessions and, being friendless, were forced to go to the Chardon St. home. For some hours they sat around the Bulfinch st. station in the hope that some provision would be made for them. The woman was the wife of one of the men.

The lodging house fire occurred at a time when apparatus was engaged in fighting a blaze in the Eliot Congregational Church at Walnut ave. and Dale st., Roxbury.

Two alarms were sounded, bringing Chief Daniel Sennett and the engine from Monument st. Charlestown, among others, of which Capt. Sullivan was in command.

The flames are believed to have started on the second floor of 588. They raced through the house despite the efforts of the firemen, who were hampered by the intense cold.

Breaking through the roof, the flames licked the adjoining house at 570, but were extinguished before they consumed much of that structure.

STAIRS COLLAPSE

Capt. Sullivan's body was found by Superintendent Joseph Kelb of the Fire and Police Notification Company, who braved the flames and smoke to reach the third floor. He carried the bodies of the fire captain and the girl down the stairs to the street.

Soon after firemen entered the building, the staircase collapsed, and several firemen had a narrow escape from death.

Capt. Sullivan, who was to have been retired from the department in a short time, entered the building as soon as he arrived from Charlestown.

The fire captain's body was formally identified at City Hospital by Cornelius Sullivan, his son, a member of Engine 3, who had been fighting a fire in the Eliot Congregational Church at Walnut ave. and Dale st., Roxbury.

Engine 3 was relieved from that fire and ordered to the Columbus ave. blaze. On arriving there Engineman Sullivan learned that a fire captain had died. He hurried to City Hospital, where he learned for the first time that it was his father.

The building at 576 Columbus ave., a four and one-half story structure, was occupied on the upper floors as a lodging house. Several of the occupants were assisted or carried to the street by firemen.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Dumas, asleep on a top floor, had a narrow escape as they fled down the smoke-choked hallway a few minutes before the stairway collapsed.

Also asleep on this floor were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morse and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brouthers.

On the second floor, Mrs. Nell Woodward and her daughter were the occupants.

The fire was discovered by Sergt. Alfred Madore of the East Dedham st. station, who, with Patrolmen Daniel Drohan and Patrick Cummings was patroling the district in a police machine.

They sounded the first alarm and then ran through the building arousing the sleepers.

Kelb and Edward Mahoney, also of the Fire and Police Notification Co., arrived soon after the alarm was sent in and rendered considerable aid in getting the occupants of the house out.

Smoke penetrated adjoining buildings, where sleepers were overcome and carried to the street.

Mrs. Mary Donovan, resident on the second floor of 579 Columbus ave., was awakened by the sound of breaking glass, and saw flames leaping up in the burning building.

She opened her bedroom window and shouted: "Fire! Fire!" She aroused many of the lodgers and enabled them to flee before the staircase collapsed.

When word was telephoned to police headquarters that several had been injured or killed at the fire, the City Hospital was notified to be ready. Miss Catherine McConville, head nurse, and Miss Elizabeth Mahoney, one of her assistants, aroused doctors and had them ready when the first of the victims arrived.

PRONOUNCES VICTIMS DEAD

Dr. Herbert Dumphy examined Capt. Sullivan and the woman and child as soon as they entered the hospital, pronouncing them dead. Capt. Sullivan, he said, had died as a result of burns and over exertion. The woman and child had been burned to death after collapsing from the smoke.

From the position and dress of the woman and girl burned to death it was believed they had aroused, after receiving the alarm to flee, to don clothing. Capt. Sullivan is believed to have found them trapped by the flames as they were dressing. Both were partially clad in black dresses.

Capt. Sullivan was appointed to the department February 11, 1898. He was promoted to lieutenant on June 8, 1917, and to captain on April 24, 1925.

The funeral will take place from his home, 40 Mystic st., Charlestown, at 9:30 a. m., Monday, followed by services at St. Francis de Sales Church.

Engine Company 23 will be excused from duty in order to attend the funeral and the chief of department will make his usual detail to serve as a funeral escort. Members of the department who are off duty have been invited to join the detail.

Flames Sweep Church; 20 Families Are Routed

Twenty families fled to the streets in the bitter cold as flames raging through the Eliot Congregational Church at Walnut ave. and Dale st., Roxbury, menaced a thickly settled residential district and caused a loss estimated at more than $100,000.

Only the granite walls of the church, long a landmark, were standing when firemen triumphed over the flames after a battle of more than two hours.

Patrolman Joseph Pinnerty of the Dudley st. station, walking past the structure on his tour of duty, saw the glare of flames through the windows and ran to sound the first alarm. While he was at the box, the fire suddenly flared forth, and had raced up through the building almost before the first apparatus arrived.

Sparks swept through the district on a stiff wind and ignited several other buildings adjacent to the church, but the vigilance of firemen prevented any further serious loss.

15 Perish as Cold Snap Sweeps Nation

With 15 deaths reported in six states, the entire country today continued in the grip of the cold wave which sent the thermometer down to nearly zero in Boston and vicinity.

The cold wave which swept out of the Canadian interior Thursday became so extensive today that sub-freezing temperatures were reported even from California, noted for its mild climate.

The lowest official temperature in New England was 4 below zero at Greenville, Me. Other official lows were Northfield, Vt., 6 above; Burlington, Vt., 8 above; Portland, Me., 10 above; Eastport, Me., 10 above, and Concord, N. H., 8 above.

The thermometer at the Pittsfield city hall showed three above, the coldest November reading in many years. Great Barrington reported 8 below zero.

WARMER OVER SUNDAY.

The local forecaster promised slightly warmer for tomorrow.

Seven deaths were reported from Chicago, where the mercury fell to zero. Two deaths were reported from Ohio, one from Wisconsin, one from Indiana, three from Pittsburgh, Pa., and one from New York city.

Dispatches from Chicago said sub-zero temperatures prevailed throughout the Middle West today and that thousands of cases of suffering required attention in the Windy City, where business was considerably slowed up because of the cold.

Lake shipping, with cargoes valued at millions of dollars sought the refuge of harbors with prospects of being frozen in for the winter.

SNOW ADDS TO MISERY

Snow in some portions of the lakes region added to the discomfort. It was estimated that nearly 3000 families received emergency assistance in Chicago on account of the cold blast.

From Pittsburgh, a dispatch stated that Paul Ott, 19, of Baltimore, Md., a freshman at Carnegie Institute of Technology, was found frozen to death on the steps of Welsh Hall, where he roomed. He was clad only in pajamas. Two other deaths in that city were credited to the cold. The temperature there fell to 2 above zero.

A woman in Staten Island, N. Y., was found frozen to death in her back yard, where she had evidently fallen in faint. Freezing temperatures prevailed throughout New York State. Malone, N. Y., reported four below zero.

The South was severely hit by the cold wave. A thin blanket of snow enveloped parts of Kentucky and Virginia. Temperatures were below the freezing point.

Dispatches from Atlanta, Ga., said temperatures ranged between 25 and 35 along the Atlantic coast far south as the Carolinas. Three inches or snow fell in Bristol, Va.

According to advices from San Francisco, the entire Pacific coast was in the grip of sub-freezing temperatures. The dryest November in 40 years came to an end there today, with no relief in sight.

In the Mother Lode section of California cattle are reported dying from lack of water. Prayers for rain are being offered by several denominations.

Several plate glass windows and a sign were blown down in Burlington, Vt., by a 30-mile wind that blew across Lake Champlain.

The coldest fair weather and vicinity: Fair, with slowly rising temperature tonight and Sunday. Fresh northerly winds. The minimum temperature tonight will be near 18 above.

BYRD'S MOTHER ELATED AS HE 'MAKES IT'

Feels That "Dick" Will Come Home Safe From Mysterious Bottom of World

Winchester, Va., Nov. 30 (AP)—Pride and love made happy a mother's heart today over the world-acclaimed achievement of a distinguished son.

Mrs. Richard Evelyn Byrd, Sr., mother of Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd, whose exploits have brought a new luster to aviation, went about her home duties as is her wont, but her heart tripped the light fantastic with ecstasy over the news that her son in adding another brilliant feat to his record, was safe and sound at the bottom of the world.

It was "glorious," she said, "and I was thrilled to death."

"I was in Washington when I heard that Dick had hopped off," the flier's mother said. "My son Tom drove up there to get me when I phoned him, and we came back to Winchester to wait for the news. The New York Times called me about 6 o'clock last night, but said they would not release the news generally until later.

"Dick had sent me a Thanksgiving radio message a few hours before they hopped off. We were very uneasy, but I was never so happy in my life as when we heard he had landed safely back at Little America. We really were quite uneasy, because this flight seemed more hazardous than anything he ever tried. Nobody knows anything much about Antarctica.

"When Tom heard Dick had gone over safely, he said he was 'tremendously relieved.' I am sure we all were, but I am very proud and excited about it all."

Mrs. Byrd recently talked by radio from the executive mansion, the home of her son, Harry F. Byrd, to her son in Little America over a telephone hook-up with radio station WGY, Schenectady, under the auspices of the Buffalo Evening News. Then she sent him her "tenderest love" and said him that her prayers followed him always. She said that she missed him "terribly" but felt he would reach home without mishaps.

Byrd Achieves New Fame

First to fly over the North Pole, Comdr. Richard E. Byrd of Boston has now added to his long list of achievements a flight across the Antarctic wastes to the South Pole and back to his Little America base.

U.S. Sees Byrd's Flight Greatest Polar Feat

in the project because of the land to which it claims title. An inclosure outlined the territory involved. In replying a few weeks ago, the State Department acknowledged receipt of the note, but avoided any discussion of the question of ownership of land.

The congratulations of the National Geographic Society were sent to Commander Byrd by its president, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor. "An flight, he said, adds "another illustrious achievement" to Byrd's "unparalleled record in aerial exploration." The society, he added, is "rightfully proud" of having had a part in supporting the expedition.

Dr. Grosvenor also described some of the difficulties that confronted Commander Byrd and contrasted them with those encountered on his flight to the North Pole.

The North Pole, he said, is an ocean; the South Pole a continent. In reaching the former, he continued, Byrd flew over floating ice fields rising but a few feet from the level of the sea, while in his achievement of this week he was compelled to soar over gigantic mountain ranges rising to a height of 10,000 to 15,000 feet.

In addition, whereas the northern polar region supports an abundance of life, both vegetable and animal, the Antarctic territory is barren and comprises some of the greatest ice fields in the world.

Among the first to proclaim Commander Byrd's achievement was a veteran of the days when polar exploration was conducted with skis and dog sled. He was Gen. A. W. Greeley, now 86, who nearly 30 years ago was a member of the expedition which then established a "farthest north" record of 83 degrees 24 minutes.

Privation and hardship haunted the expedition, and but seven returned of the 25 men that originally made up the company.

Byrd's Wife and Family Learn in Hub of Flight

Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, in seclusion with her four children at the Back Bay home of her mother, today had learned of the great accomplishment of her husband. She heard the news by radio before retiring last night.

Mrs. Byrd had not heard directly from her explorer-husband. It was learned at the Brimmer st. home of Mrs. Joseph H. Ames, her mother.

The most excited of Commander Byrd's four children today was Richard, Jr., 10, who has for a long time taken a keen interest in his father's activities. The Byrds also have three daughters.

Mrs. Byrd refused to comment on her husband's feat. She has always been confident of the success of his ventures, saying: "I have always assumed my husband's missions would be successful."

POLA NEGRI TO WED FRIML

Hollywood, Nov. 30—With the filing in Paris of Pola Negri's long-expected suit for divorces from Prince Serge Mdivani, Hollywood began to speculate upon the possibility of her marriage to Rudolph Friml, noted composer.

And, according to dispatches from Paris, there is the added possibility that Mdivani may marry Mary McCormick, opera singer and protege of Mary Garden.

Friml is en route to Hollywood to write the music for a picture Arthur Hammerstein will produce for United Artists.

His engagement to Pola was rumored several weeks ago when the Polish film star and her Georgia prince first parted.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a Situation Wanted ad and the best are advertised daily in the Post Boston.

NAVY MAN GAVE BYRD HIS 'MAP OF THE POLE'

Littlehales, Scientist, Made an Almanac of Antarctic to Prove When He Got There

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—George Washington Littlehales, a white-haired navy scientist to whom Comdr. Richard E. Byrd has come with his navigation problems for the past 18 years, sits in his cozy office at department headquarters making calculation to tell Arctic explorers when they have reached their goals in the frozen white wastes at the earth's ends.

Comdr. Byrd took a set of Littlehales' computations with him on his successful dash for the South Pole. By comparing readings on an everyday mariner's instrument—a sextant of reflection—with figures supplied by the scientist, Byrd could tell in a moment where he was at any time.

Once, Littlehales said today, it was impossible for a navigator in the cockpit to compute mathematical formulas as quickly as the airplane flew—and the result was that the goal was reached before the explorer knew it.

HOW IT WORKED

That was the reason Donald B. MacMillan returned from the Arctic in 1926 and announced that the plane had not been shown to be practical for Arctic exploration.

"Byrd had been with MacMillan, and he saw that there was his opportunity," the aging scientist continued. "He understood why Amundsen, fighting these icy wastes a year earlier, had been compelled to land to make his computations, and Byrd knew the hardship and peril and failure that landing cost the Amundsen expedition."

Not long after Byrd explained the difficulty, Littlehales "saw it all at once," he said. It occurred to him that the computations of Amundsend and others had attempted to make as they went along could be prepared in advance.

This he worked out in columns of figures four to the page, and 30 pages long. He called these computations a "nautical almanac."

"Ever since our navy planes first crossed the Atlantic, in 1919, when three seaplanes flew from Newfoundland to Spain," the scientist added, "Byrd has been a frequent visitor with me. I got the almanac ready for him soon after he came back that spring of 1926.

SUN COMPASS AIDS

"He knew navigation," continued Littlehales, "and I could talk convincingly with Rockefeller and Ford and others who financed his expedition. He knew how to work into the Arctic that summer and, of course, located line pole."

Byrd used Littlehales' almanac in locating the North Pole, too.

One other invaluable tool—that which cold Byrd how to keep his plane flying in the direction of the Pole—was worked out by a Bureau of Standards scientist with material assistance from Littlehales. It is the "sun compass," a little instrument that tells directions in the desolate places where magnetic compasses have no value.

A simple dial with an upright pin in it to cast a shadow, it tells directions on a principle directly opposite from that of the sun dials that were in everyone's garden a generation ago.

Since 1885, Littlehales has been poring over his computations in his office in the Navy Department. He has worked out many other intricate processes, always adapting principles of mathematics and astronomy to the use of navigation. Among his scores of scientific papers and thousands of pamphlets—a life's work that has brought him acclaim among fellow scientists—is a translation of mathematical principles into words understandable to the average seaman, thus giving him a valuable assistance in setting a course and keeping his vessel upon it.

Ship With 34 Men Ashore in Pacific

San Francisco, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Radio Marine Corporation today announced receipt of a wireless message saying the British freighter Norwich City had gone ashore on Gardner island, one of the Phoenix group in the Pacific, south of Hawiis.

The message, which reached here through radio stations at Tutuila, Samoa and Honolulu, said:

"S O S. Ashore on Gardner island. Going fast."

The Norwich City is a freighter of 5537 tons, oil burning, and was built in 1911 at Whirtlepool, Eng., for the Reardon Smith line.

The ship left Melbourne, Australia, November 19, believed in ballast, and was due in Honolulu December 10. She is a "tramp" steamer with a crew of about 34 men. On her last voyage from this port she carried wheat to the United Kingdom.

Bridal Couple Held in Store Robbery

A 17-year-old bride and her husband of four days were arrested today and charged with being the leading spirits in one of the most daring robberies in Essex county in years, for which two men and another girl had been arrested a few hours before.

The couple are booked as Mr and Mrs. George Ryan of School st., Lynn. Police say they were captured as they were preparing for a hasty departure on a honeymoon, to be defrayed on the loot of the robbery.

The others arrested are:

Miss Florence Reynolds, 22, of Rogers ave., Lynn.

Harold A. Rounseville, 20, at Acorn st., Lynn, who gave his occupation as secretary to Rosen Sears, Watch and Ward agent of Lynn.

James P. Burnette, 273 Essex st., Lynn, who later signed a complete confession, which led to the arrest of the Ryans.

In Salem District Court the three men were charged with robbery while armed and larceny of an automobile and the two girls with robbery. All five entered pleas of not guilty and after bail had been set at $10,000 each, they were remanded to the county jail.

ROBBERY AT GUNPOINT

Police charge the five, with another man still being sought, walked into the Walter H. Newton drugstore in Danvers sq., held up the clerks at gunpoint and robbed the place of $200.

But for a minor infraction of traffic rules, it is said, the youthful robbers might have escaped.

A short time after the robbery, State Trooper Thomas Norton, on duty on the Newburyport turnpike, saw a machine speed around a corner without slowing down, and gave chase. He pursued the car until the occupants abandoned it and took refuge in the woods.

Norton, realizing the futility of continuing the chase alone, returned to Danvers for aid. Meanwhile word of the daring robbery had spread and Peabody police had already joined Danvers authorities in the search.

Burnette and Reynolds are said to have appeared at a gasoline station near the Danvers-Peabody line and telephoned to the Sullivan Taxi Co. in Danvers sq. for a cab. Sullivan, having been robbed recently, became suspicious and notified police.

FOLLOW TAXICAB

Officers were assigned to follow the cab. On arrival at the gas station, they placed Burnette and the girl under arrest. On the way back to Danvers they overtook Somerville, who was walking along the road.

All three were taken to the Danvers police headquarters, where Burnette, after a grilling, broke down and admitted the holdup and the theft of a car, earlier in the day at Lynn, according to police. His information led police to the home of the newlyweds.

The young couple had already packed their bags and were preparing to leave on a honeymoon police say. They were arrested by Sergts. Thomas Ryan and William Fee.

A checkup on police records revealed that Ryan served a year's term in prison on a larceny conviction, and another term in federal prison for desertion from the Marine Corps, the authorities assert.

CANTOR MUST SERVE TERM

Harry J. Cantor of East Boston must continue to serve a sentence of a year in the house of correction for defamatory statements about former Gov. Alvan T. Fuller on a placard he carried in front of the State House saying Fuller was the "murderer of Sacco and Vanzetti."

The full bench of the Supreme Court so ruled in a decision handed down today.

The court sustains the conviction and sentence of Cantor, holding that the late Judge Robert Raymond, who tried the case, did not err in refusing to accept testimony that the defense claimed would tend to prove former Gov. Fuller was morally responsible for the double electrocution.

Fresh-Sophomore Smoker Wednesday

The Northeastern fresh-sophomore smoker, given by the first year men to the sophs as a penalty for losing the annual fall rush, will be held next Wednesday evening in Rates Hall.

Noble L. Davis of Dorchester is chairman of the social committee, which will be in charge of the affair. Assisting Davis are Gordon C. Anderson, Haverhill; Harry A. Reede, Atlantic; Myron C. Chaput, Haverhill; John M. Gardiner, Newton Center; Ralph E. Hammer, Lynn, and George F. Osborn, Leominster.

Lexington Case Taken to Hoover

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—Use of the airplane carrier Lexington to generate electrical power for Tacoma and Seattle, Wash., was asked of President Hoover today by Senators Jones and Bill and Representative Johnson, all of Washington.

Mr. Hoover was told there was not enough water to generate power needed and that the cities faced a serious situation unless relief could be provided.

No Pilgrims Appear at the Shrine Today

For the first time since the pilgrimage began to the shrine of Fr. Patrick J. Power in Holy Cross cemetery, Malden, not a person appeared at the graveyard gates today. The near-zero weather coupled with the order closing the cemetery to all but funeral parties had the effect of keeping everybody away.

WATCH CHURCH FOR LOST WIFE

Search for Mrs. Beecher Maynard Crouse, Utica (N. Y.) society woman, missing since November 14, centered in Medford today, after word had been received by police there that the missing woman might appear at a Medford church.

The Medford police were asked to aid the Utica officers and private detectives, following information that Mrs. Crouse had expressed an interest in one of the Medford churches.

Today all church sexions, as well as police officers were on watch for her. Mrs. Crouse was deeply interested in Hindu mystic cults. Her husband, a banker, has offered $5000 reward for his wife's return.

Scottish Martyr Extolled by Pope

Vatican City, Nov. 30 (AP)—Bishop J. T. McNally of Hamilton, Ont., today attended the ceremony at Consistorial hall for the reading of the decree recognizing the martyrdom of the Venerable John Ogilvie, Scottish Catholic, who lived during the 17th century.

Pope Pius, after hearing the decree, said that the beatification of Fr. Ogilvie constituted one of the dearest consolations of his junior year. He then imparted the benediction on all those present.

3 Hurt in Fireworks Factory Explosion

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—Three firemen were seriously burned and a large storage warehouse destroyed in an explosion and fire of undetermined cause at the Unexcelled Manufacturing Co., Inc., a fireworks factory at Grantville on Staten Island today.

Freezing temperatures and a strong wind hampered the efforts of seven fire companies from surrounding villages and it was more than an hour before the flames were controlled.

Woodsman Killed by Falling Tree

Norwich Ct., Nov. 30 (AP)—Orien Ready, 33, a wood cutter, died early today at the Norwalk Hospital from a fractured skull received yesterday when he was pinned to the ground by a falling tree. Ready was chopping down the tree when it fell the wrong way and struck him.

Fans Flock to Boston for B. C.-H. C. Clash

Undeterred by cold, football fans poured into Boston today by the thousands for the classic struggle at Fenway Park between Holy Cross and Boston College.

By train, automobile and trolley they arrived with banners waving, and armbands sporting the purple of the Crusaders and the maroon and gold of the Eagles.

Indications of a record-breaking attendance were in evidence with practically the entire undergraduate bodies of both colleges present.

The Boston & Albany ran an extra train from Worcester to accommodate 400 Holy Cross rooters which was scheduled to leave at noon and run express to Huntington ave., arriving at 1:08 p. m.

Members of the Holy Cross team with trainers and other officials traveled on a special coach attached to the Boston & Albany train leaving Worcester at 9:15, which arrived at Huntington ave. at 10:16 a. m.

Extra care will be provided for returning fans on Boston & Albany trains wherever necessary.

FOIL CONVICTS IN BIG BREAK

Buenos Aires, Nov. 30 (AP)—A daring attempt to escape from the national penitentiary was discovered today. The prisoners had dug a tunnel about 25 feet long and had hidden weapons there ready for the break.

It was found that the prisoners had been excavating for six months and flight had been planned similarly to one in August, 1923, when 14 prisoners fled. Thirteen of these, however, were captured.

The only one escaping to liberty was Ramon Silvayra, an anarchist, who is still at large. There are 636 prisoners in the penitentiary, which is very old.

Harvard Lodge Installs Officers

Kenneth S. Boardman was installed as master of Harvard Lodge, A. F. & A. M., at a public ceremony in Masonic Temple, Cambridge.

Worshipful Master Boardman is the first of the men raised in Harvard Lodge to gain the post through the line. The lodge held its first communication in 1922.

FIRE DESTROYS SCIENCE SHIP

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP)—A message received today by the Carnegie institution from W. C. Parkinson, senior scientific officer of the yacht, Carnegie, destroyed in Apia Harbor, Samoa, by fire, said the blaze started by an explosion which occurred during the loading of gasoline.

Capt. J. P. Ault, who was fatally burned, was the only one of the scientific staff on the quarterdeck at the time, Parkinson said, adding that of four members of the crew in hospital the condition of the machinist was grave and that of the engineer serious.

Parkinson reported the fire spread so rapidly there was no possible chance of salvaging any equipment save cash and the ship's books.

No iron and steel was used in constructing the Carnegie and she was non-magnetic. She had been used for many years for scientific purposes and was on a cruise carrying a part of 17 scientists who were studying magnetism and atmospheric electricity at the time of the disaster.

Train Slowly Takes Hero Dead Home

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—The special train bearing the bodies of 73 members of the 1918 American Expeditionary Force to North Russia, last of the World War soldier dead brought home, was on its way west today.

Running at reduced speed, the nine-car train moved out of the Pennsylvania terminal for Bethel, where 56 of the 73 bodies will be interred. Its engine draped in black, the train proceeded at slow speed through New Jersey where honors were given by city and state authorities and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

National Guard Can Dress Up in Blue

Washington, Nov. 30 (INS)—National Guard troops are to be permitted to purchase the natty blue uniforms for functions other than field service.

The regular army has them now, and wear them usually on unofficial occasions on furlough or in the evening, acting Secretary of War Hurley in making the authorization, said the blues could be purchased from the army quartermaster from private funds when wearing the uniform has the approval of state authorities.

Mrs. Rockefeller Gets License to Wed

New York, Nov. 30 (AP)—Mrs. Florence L. Rockefeller, who was divorced from William A. Rockefeller in Bridgeport, Ct., last October 5, today obtained a marriage license at the municipal building to marry George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute.

Mrs. Rockefeller is 32 years old and a daughter of Frederick W. Lincoln. She was born in this city.

Mr. Sloan is 36 years old. He was born in Nashville, Tenn., a son of Paul L. Sloan.

Dashes Hopes for Safety of Eielson

Nome, Alaska, Nov. 30 (AP)—Hope for the safety of two Alaskan aviators, last since November 9 on the coast of Siberia, was dashed today. Engineer Deerdoff, of the icebound ship Nanuk, announced he had scouted 90 miles of the coast without finding a trace of Carl Ben Eielson, pilot, and Earl Borland, mechanic, of a plane lost while seeking to rescue passengers of the Nanuk.

Woman Slides 25 Feet Fleeing 'Burglars'

Fearing that two men had gained entrance to her second floor apartment at 24 Hillside ave., Malden, today, Miss Hilda Morey, 42, climbed through the window of her bedroom and slid 25 feet down a water spout to call the police.

In effecting her hasty departure Miss Morey, daughter of Madame Ellen Beal Morey, a singer of note, and sister of Dave Morey, football coach at Bates College, suffered serious cuts and burns on her hands. In addition, there proved to be no one in the apartment.

Miss Morey told police she was aroused from sleep by the loud voices of two men. She said she was certain someone had gained entrance to her home. She jumped from bed and after donning a bathrobe fled through the window, down the spout and to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Fenner L. Beal, next door.

Police searched the house but found no evidence that anyone had gained entrance. They concluded Miss Morey was aroused by voices in the street, and being only half aroused, believed there were intruders in the house.

CUSHING KNIFE AIDS DAUGHTER

Barbara Cushing, 12-year-old daughter of Dr. Harvey Cushing, world famous surgeon, is resting comfortably today at Peter Bent Brigham hospital following an operation performed by her father.

The young patient had been suffering from a gland trouble and Dr. Cushing decided to take upon himself a task that few in the medical profession have done, operating upon members of their immediate families.

Hospital authorities said the operation as not a particularly serious one. Barbara is expected to recover rapidly, it was reported today.

Burglars Carry Off Safe With $1051

Bridgeport, Ct., Nov. 30 (AP)—Burglars early today robbed the office of the National Transportation Co. here, carrying off a safe containing $1051.

Walter Block, an employe, left the office to get a bill changed and returned 15 minutes later to find the safe gone. He saw an auto, believed to contain the burglars, disappearing in the distance.

Woman Hit by Truck on Washington St.

As detectives attempted to place him under arrest he drew a gun and killed himself.

Ex-Officer Held in Gun Sale to Bootlegs

Los Angeles, Nov. 30 (AP)—W. R. McKay, former captain in the ordnance corps of the Canadian army, was detained here today by Sergeant L. L. Sampson of the Royal Canadian mounted police and Deputy United States Marshal Kenneth McLean.

McKay was charged with the theft from the Canadian government of a Lewis machine gun, which it is alleged he sold to rum runners operating on the United States border. The Canadian officer said that McKay, who was stationed at an army post at Vancouver, was suspected of selling other government supplies and weapons to rum runners.

Renew Roundup of Carson Robber Gang

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 30 (AP)—Allied agencies of law enforcement today renewed their roundup of the gang responsible for the sensational Carson robbery, when guests at a society party were stripped of $250,000 in jewels. With four persons in custody, one of them the woman companion of Clinton Duke, termed leader of the gem-thief mob, police of Buffalo, the sheriff of Erie county and private detective forces were concentrating on capture of additional members of the band with view to swift cleanup of one of the boldest robberies in Erie county crime annals.

Hoover Parley to Be Broadcast

New York, Nov. 30—The National Broadcasting Company announced that the proceedings of the first meeting of the permanent business conference, organized at the direction of President Hoover, will be broadcast over a nationwide network Dec. 5.

The broadcast, which will go on the air at 10 a. m., Eastern Standard time, has been offered to all stations in the NBC system. All conflicting programs will be cancelled to make way for the conference broadcast, the announcement said.

SCIENTISTS SEE BYRD SOLVING BIG PROBLEM

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—The greatest scientific mystery of Antarctica which the Byrd expedition may help to clarify is whether it is one or two continents.

Byrd's camp is on the outer tip of the world's largest glacier, called The Barrier, which hides far southward into the land masses of the continent. Around on the other side of Antarctica, nearly opposite his camp, is another huge bay that extends southward far toward the interior. It is the Weddell sea. Explorers long have claimed that fragmentary evidence indicated there might be a connection between the water beneath the barrier where Little America lies and the Weddell sea. One of the theories pointed out that tides indicated this possibility.

The elevation of the country where this break in the continent might exist would go far toward answering the riddle. If the elevations are thousands of feet, scientists believe the heights would indicate dry land buried in the ice beneath. Should there prove to be a low, comparatively flat plain beneath the Weddell sea and the barrier, it would be taken as indicating the possibility of a thick coating of ice overlying either shallow water, or a series of low islands, about which water might flow beneath the ice.

Byrd already has made some short flights in the general direction of the Weddell sea. In these flights he has found granite mountains sticking up through the ice.

Sir Hubert Wilkins plans, if possible, to fly southward over the territory where this split in Antarctica would lie if it exists.

Has Flown Over Both Poles; Back at His Base Today

By the Associated Press.

Comdr. Richard E. Byrd, safely back at his base, Little America, from a flight to the South Pole, today holds the unique distinction of being the only man to fly over both poles of the earth.

By bending to the use of his courage and skill the tools supplied by modern mechanical and scientific progress, he achieved within three and one-half years what no other polar explorer has accomplished in a lifetime, visits to the top and bottom of the globe by air.

Flying to the South Pole, he did in less than a day what it had previously taken more than three months to accomplish.

The Antarctic flight was beset with difficulties far greater than those encountered in Byrd's trip to the North Pole, which was made May 9, 1926. The distance of each flight was about the same, 1600 miles.

On the flight to the North Pole and back, made in 15 hours 30 minutes, there was no stop.

Comdr. Byrd navigated his plane to and back from the South Pole over a jagged mountain chain with sentinel-like peaks that rise anywhere from 10,000 to 15,000 feet. The Antarctic is mostly barren of plant life and without human habitants and even animals, due to its severe climate, even in summer which is at hand there now, there are no inhabitants. In the Arctic there are Eskimos and summer vegetation.

Byrd flew from Spitzbergen to the North Pole over floating ice fields arising only a few feet above sea level, with here and there open leads of water. From the edge of the southern ice barrier he flew 40 miles over an accumulation of ice rising 150 feet or more above the sea and solid as land and then soared over mountains to the polar plateau and back again.

Byrd's flight to the South Pole is a striking demonstration of the conquest of modern methods of travel and communication of distances and other physical obstacles encountered in polar exploration when compared with similar feats accomplished by older methods.

Byrd's Grandmother Waits to Fly in His Polar Plane

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (INS)—There's a kindly, white haired lady of 90 living here who is patiently waiting for "Little Dickie" to return from the Antarctic and take her for a flight in the same plane which flew across the South Pole yesterday.

She is Mrs. William Byrd, grandmother of Commander Richard E. Byrd, and she anxiously awaited the outcome of the flight across the Pole. She sat by the radio all afternoon hoping to get tidings, and her daughter, Miss Mary Armistead Byrd, read all newspaper accounts to her. She was told last night of her grandson's success.

No surprise was expressed by her, as she said she knew "Dickie would make it." She explained that since childhood, whatever her grandson undertook, he carried through to success.

Four Convicted in Cotton Mill Riots

Marion, N. C., Nov. 10 (AP)—Alfred Hoffman, United Textile Workers of America organizer, and Lawrence Hogan, Del Lewis and Wes Fowler, cotton mills strikers, today were convicted by a jury in McDowell Superior Court of rioting. They were acquitted of resisting arrest.

Hoffman was fined $1000 and sentenced to one month in jail, and Fowler, Hogan and Lewis were given six months each on the chain gang.

To Perform Weird Antics for Kiddies

Amazing and almost unbelievable are the feats which these weird characters perform at the behest of Blackstone, the master magician, now appearing at the Keith-Albee Theater. Blackstone and his eccentric company will put on their highly entertaining act for the children of Boston at the free show to be given under the auspices of the Boston Evening American. The show will be held in the Boston Arena, donated for the purpose by George V. Brown.

240 TO LEAVE HUB ON SCYTHIA

With 240 passengers to board her here, the Cunarder Scythia will sail from East Boston tomorrow for Liverpool and Queenstown.

Mrs. Guy W. Currier of Commonwealth ave., Back Bay, wife of the new Boston Port Authority chairman, is among the passengers booked. She will be accompanied by her son, Guy W. Currier, Jr., and her daughter, Mrs. Robert Steinert of Gloucester st., Back Bay.

Others booked from here include Mrs. Frank T. Washington, who will join her husband in Calcutta, India; Mrs. Kerr-Seymer, prominent Christian Scientist, and the Rt. Rev. Abbot Winston Knowles of the Benedictine Order.

Monday can't come too soon for Boston's Kiddiand, when by the hundreds the youngsters will troop to the big Boston Arena to witness the free entertainment to be provided for them by the Boston Evening American.

George V. Brown has donated the Arena and the kiddies will be treated to a real show with "Blackstone, America's Foremost Magician," who is headlining on the Keith-Albee bill, keeping them on the edges of their seats with his great feats of magic.

Blackstone, who is a favorite of the youth of the land, likes to give them a chance to share with the adults the enjoyment of his marvelous tricks, and through the Boston Evening American and Manager Brown of the Arena, the opportunity for the show was provided.

Watson Seeks to Put Vare Case Off Again

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—Another postponement of the Vare case in the Senate was proposed today by Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader, in mapping out the program for the regular session beginning Monday.

Watson would have the Senate act on the contest brought against William S. Vare, senator-elect from Pennsylvania, by William B. Wilson, his Democratic opponent, before acting on the resolution denying Vare a seat on account of his expenditures in the primary campaign.

$250,000,000 SUITS SETTLED

Newark, N. J., Nov. 10 (AP)—Announcement was made today of the settlement of three infringement suits, involvin, an estimated sum of $250,000,000, against the United States Steel Corp., the Carnegie Steel Co. and the American Bridge Co.

The firms are New Jersey corporations, and the litigation was filed in federal court here by the Bethlehem Steel Co. as plaintiff in three actions, and the American Steel and Wire Co. in two.

Charges of infringement on five patents on improved methods of rolling flanged bars and solid metal bars used in construction work, were included in the bills of complaint.

WARN HUNTERS OF GUNNING RULES

Coincident with the announcement today of the open season on deer, which starts Monday at sunrise and ends at sunset Dec. 14, Director of Fisheries and Game William C. Adams disclosed that the state paid deer crop damage claims for 1928 amounting to nearly $12,-000.

"It was in an effort to reduce this amount of damage that a longer open season was provided," he declared.

Because the greater amount of the damage was done in the five western counties, he said, there the hunting should be best. He added that many deer also have been reported in Plymouth county this season. In this latter county, however, the open season extends only during the first week, from December 2 to 7, both dates inclusive.

Here are some of the things that hunters must know and observe to escape penalties that have been set up:

Only one deer can be taken by each hunter and a written report must be sent to the director within 24 hours.

No deer or part thereof taken in this state can be bought or sold.

Shotguns only can be used.

No hunting dogs can be used, or allowed to roam at large during the season.

Artificial lights or any device for the purpose of ensaring, enticing or taking the animals, is prohibited.

To prevent loss of life or serious injury to hunters, the director urges great care by all who enter the woods during the hunting season.

"Hunters should make absolutely certain of what they are shooting at before a gun is discharged," the director warns. "The firing at distant moving objects is a hazardous practice bordering on criminal negligence."

Hindenburg in First Pose for Movie Men

Berlin, Nov. 10 (AP)—For the first time since becoming President, Marshal von Hindenburg permitted movie men to film him at work at his desk.

After posing for about two minutes, he said: "Only two minutes agreed upon are more than enough." His secretary, Otto Meissner saved the situation by saying: "But Your Excellency, don't you remember the agreement was for 10 minutes." The president good-naturedly retorted: "Ah, but I know these photographers' minutes," he then submitted patiently to the cameramen's further instructions.

CHINA-SOVIET PEACE MOVE IS HELD UP

Nanking, China, Nov. 10 (AP)—C. T. Wang, Foreign Minister of the Nanking Central Chinese Government, today denied emphatically that direct negotiations were proceeding between China and Russia for settlement of the military problem grown up around the Chinese Eastern Railway in Manchuria.

Commenting on reports from Geneva that Dr. C. C. Wu, representing the Nanking Government at the League of Nations, had received official messages from Nanking of opening of negotiations, the Nanking Foreign Minister said:

"We telegraphed Dr. Wu at Geneva that we had sent Moscow our proposals as published Thursday. Apparently, Dr. Wu interpreted them that we had reached the stage of direct negotiations. His view was erroneous."

The proposals published Thursday, but sent to Moscow a considerable time before, demanded first a Sino-Russian joint commission to investigate border conditions, and second, withdrawal of troops by both sides to at least 30 miles from the border.

The proposal ended with the statement that rejection would "indicate Russia entertains warlike ambitions toward China. The National Government will be prepared to meet the Soviet move accordingly."

Today Wang added: "When Moscow accepts Nanking's conditions then Nanking will be ready and willing to negotiate. Now we are just trying to establish a basis for negotiations and that basis has not yet been reached."

'Slain' Man Back After 30 Years in Hiding

Johnson City, Tenn., Nov. 10 (AP)—Thirty years after his strange disappearance and 10 years after a death bed confession of his murder, Als Artrip was back today in his Cumberland mountain home in Southwest Virginia, near here.

An attempt had been made to kill him by Hunt Hall three decades ago, he related. The two men and Hall's son, Dave, had gone fishing. Years later a human skeleton was found and identified as that of Artrip, who had never returned from the fishing trip and 20 years after their trip Hall lay on his deathbed.

He confessed that he had struck Artrip with an ax, taken $100 in gold from his pockets, covered him with driftwood and fence rails and set them fire.

Artrip confirmed this story, but said that when the flames reached him he regained consciousness, threw off the weights and escaped. He did not learn of Hall's death until recently and said he had feared to return home as long as Hall was alive.

First Vatican City Suicide a Woman

Vatican City, Nov. 10 (INS)—The first suicide ever to occur in this Holy City caused consternation among Vatican authorities today. The wife of a law official threw herself from a terrace to the Belvidere courtyard and was killed.

STAGE AND SCREEN

FRIENDSHIP BUTTERS NO PARSNIPS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

AS it has been so nicely pointed out by one of the minor philosophers along the Rialto, a prophet can be no greater than his profit. Which, in the easy manner with which we regard the relations of the producer to his principal actors, appears to submerge the subject into the broad field of practical economics.

* * *

PERSONAL relations between the speculative gentleman who pays all the costs of production and the applauded player who enjoys his cheers may be intimate, but almost invariably their intra-office correspondence is dotted with dollar marks. This does not mean, of course, that Mr. Florenz Ziegfeld does not hold Mr. Eddie Cantor in the highest esteem. There isn't any question about it. But at the moment Mr. Cantor, whose faithful devotion to the arts has made him a major investor instead of merely a reader of the financial columns, is planning to walk out on the best meal ticket any actor ever enjoyed. He can afford to do this even in the face of what we are told is a million dollar loss in recent stock ticker acrobatics.

Nicholas Young

* * *

STILL Mr. Ziegfeld does not complain. His affection for Mr. Cantor is still at high pitch; as high, undoubtedly, as when Cantor greeted the Ziegfeldian salary bid at $1500 a week instead of $5000. Any actor who retires with a fortune must have acquired it from some source. In this case we should say that a responsive public and Florenz Ziegfeld were simply disbursing angels in holiday disguise. When Mr. Cantor finally disentangles himself from nightly duty he may offer up thanks that Ziegfeld was an active guardian of the theater when he was just a comical lad trying to get ahead. It would be a gracious gesture.

* * *

WHILE Mr. Ziegfeld may find it necessary to look for a new boy to fill the Cantor galoshes, the problem of replacement for Cantor as private and special privileges, Mr. Cantor's widely heralded promise of divorce from Ziegfeld for rest, recreation and what goes with it, has for parallel in the Al Jolson departure from the Shubert banner. With two of their five downtown temples closed for want of paying tenants, how fortunate it would be for all concerned if Jolson were still subject to call at the old terms.

* * *

AND so, it may be repeated, the affections between star and producer are economic—not personal. Why, we can remember when Mr. Ziegfeld gladly paid Leon Errol $2500 a week and he didn't even like him.

Grand Opera Makes It a Triad With Drama and Musical Comedy on Boston Boards

LYNN FONTANNE

THE GLORIOUS Miss Fontanne will be seen Monday at the Hollis in the Theater Guild production of "Meteor." The premiere is a red-letter event. The author of the play hails from Worcester.

BETTY DUMBRIS

MISS DUMBRIS doesn't need the Redskin headgear to bring out her beauteous lines. She is in "Whoopee," resplendent Ziegfeld show at the Colonial. Pocahontas would envy this lassie.

ZARA JAY

TALENTED DIVA is Miss Jay, who is mezzo soprano with the Boston Grand Opera Company. She will be heard Monday night in "La Gioconda" at the Boston Opera House. Her role is "La Cieca."

Lustrous Eyes

CAROL LOMBARD

MISS LOMBARD has the real beauty lure in "Big News" at the Keith-Albee.

WHY WORRY IF 'MONK' GOES WHOOPEE?

By BERNARD SOBEL

EVEN Florenz Ziegfeld was worried, and the more he worried the more he pondered on the fortunes of "Whoopee," the laughing musical comedy success now playing a limited engagement at the Colonial. Eddie Cantor, star of "Whoopee," seemed anxious also, and when his superb rendition of "Making Whoopee" came to his end with its last meaningful note, he stood there unmindful of the wave of applause, preoccupied, his head bent forward as if straining to catch some far off sound, and Frances Upton, capricious comedienne, was undoubtedly worried likewise. Even the dancers knew this when they saw her fail a second encore for her specialty dance. They realized that there was a distrait expression in her wondrous eyes, that her thoughts were outside the theater.

Bernard Sobel

Perhaps, however, there was no need of worrying. The new thought struck Mr. Ziegfeld with the suddenness that brought instant relief. He breathed freely again, recovered himself completely, seemed natural, modish, jovial, and laughter somehow began to spread throughout the entire theater. Miss Upton became carefree again. Paul Gregory sang brilliantly. Doris Robins smiled happily. Eddie Cantor was happy, Jack Rutherford was at his ease. The ballet dancers and Tamara Geva were up on their toes.

The stage hands relaxed, for even if, as Mr. Ziegfeld finally but certainly realized, even if a little old Italian organ grinder was standing right there now in front of the theater during the performance, even if he was grinding out vigorously the most popular numbers in "Whoopee" while the monkey pumped about, an organ grinder is only an organ grinder and cannot be considered competition in the real sense of the word. Besides, organ grinders have to grind out something, and why not the song hits of "Whoopee."

MUSIC AT MET TOMORROW

THE People's Symphony Orchestra will present the second regular concert at the Metropolitan tomorrow afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock. The doors will be opened at 1:30 p. m. Giuseppe Creatore, who conducted the initial concert, concludes his engagement with the second concert. Pauline Talma, soprano, is to sing, accompanied by the symphonic orchestra of 65 pieces.

The program follows: "Capriccio Italienne," Tschaikowsky; "Largo" from "New World Symphony," Dvorak; "Cavatina" from "The Pearl Fishers," Bizet, and "Phantasia" from "Carmen," Bizet-Creatore.

WORCESTER SCHOOLED YOUTH FOR PLAYWRIGHT FUTURE

FATE keeps on happening—even to playwrights. Expert testimony concerning that statement can be given by Samuel N. Behrman, who is the current selection of the Hollis Street Playwright-of-the-Week Club. Fate for Behrman has kept on happening since as a boy in Worcester he first haunted the stock company of the Worcester Theater. It reached its first climax in 1927 when he came out with two simultaneous productions.

One was "The Second Man," which the Theater Guild installed at its own playhouse; the other was "Love Is Like That." Now Behrman returns to the Guild with his new play, "Meteor," which will have its premiere at the Hollis on Monday. Behrman's interest in the theater seems first to have manifested itself when, as a boy, he became one of the new'n'n minor miseances by hanging around the Worcester home of the drama in search of autographed photographs of Edmund Breese, Helen Ware, Florence Reed and other members of the stock company which operated there. A little later he developed what may best be described as a positive craze to write for the stage, and this took the form of turning out playlets and sketches. One of them was brought to the attention of the Poli vaudeville bookers and was given several weeks of engagements. The cast was headed by none other than S. N. Behrman himself.

S. N. Behrman

His family dragged him out of vaudeville and sent him back to school. After two years at Clark University the magnet of George Pierce Baker's '47 Workshop at Harvard induced him to transfer to that university, from which he obtained his A. B. degree. He not only took work under Prof. Baker but was a member of Charles Townsend Copeland's classes as well.

Leaving Harvard he went to Columbia, where in due time he received his Master of Arts degree.

THE WALLS DO HAVE LOTS OF EARS

SUCCESS in the theater largely lies in the ability of the player to construct in his mind the fourth wall of the scenes in which he plays, says Miss June Walker, who is being co-starred with Glenn Hunter in "Waterloo Bridge," at the Tremont. Naturalness of action upon the stage comes only when the player can come to consider himself isolated from all but the persons with whom he is playing.

June Walker

"The greater part of our scenes nowadays is laid in rooms or in enclosed spaces of small areas," says Miss Walker. "One side of a stage room, of course, must be left open in order that the players may be visible to the audience.

"But the players must be as oblivious of the audience as if the fourth wall were a reality. Complete naturalness comes only when one can attain a state of mind in which the wall can be imagined.

"It is comparatively easy for a player to refrain from looking out over the footlights. In the first place, the glare is such that he can see little, and many players go through a performance without once sitting or standing in a position which makes it possible for them to look out into the auditorium.

"I have come to believe that good acting consists in a remarkable degree of concentration upon the business in hand, and almost at the beginning of my stage career I was taught that the best players tried to lose themselves in their characters.

Burlesque Charm

INA THOMAS

MISS THOMAS adds to the pep of "Take a Chance" at the Howard next week.

SAYS STAGE IS NEAR FINISH

WILLIAM BOYD, star of the all-talking romantic drama, "The Locked Door," to be seen and heard at Loew's State the coming week, thinks the legitimate theater is nearing its finish. He does not say that stage shows will be killed off entirely by the popularity of sound pictures, but he believes that the Little Theaters will supplant them.

"The reason for this," Boyd explains, "is that the so-called talkies are able to give us all that the stage has and much more for a smaller admission price. If I had thought the theater was as permanent now as it has been in the past, I would not have left Broadway for Hollywood."

SING HO! FOR OPERA'S ON THE WAY

THE first season of the new Boston Grand Opera Company, financed by a group of prominent Boston music lovers, and enlisting the services of a large group of singers of former or present Metropolitan Opera Company and foreign opera experience, opens Monday night with a performance of "La Gioconda," at the Boston Opera House.

* * *

THE leading star among the male singers, and the one largely responsible for the casting and general direction of the operas, is Pasquale Amato, for many years one of the most popular baritones of the Metropolitan. He will sing a role in which the dramatic gifts of the singer are given unlimited opportunity. In the course of the Boston season, Amato will be heard in other roles with which he has particularly identified, such as Figaro in "Barber of Seville," Amonasro in "Aida," Tonio in "Pagliacci," Scarpia in "Tosca" and Iago in "Otello."

Beatrice Belkin

* * *

THE title role in Monday's opera is taken by Anna Lissetskaya. She is described as a young woman of great beauty of face and figure, and of remarkable voice. The tenor role will be sung by Giuseppe Radaelli, dramatic tenor from La Scala opera in Milan, who will sing most of the heroic tenor roles with the Boston company. The mezzo roles of Laura and La Cieca are sung by May Barron and Zara Jay, respectively, two young American singers with wide operatic experience.

* * *

DURING the coming week, other singers of special interest will be heard including Dorothy Speare, novelist-prima donna, who sings Violetta in "La Traviata," Tuesday. Sophie Brastau, long identified in prominent contralto roles at the Metropolitan and familiar to Boston concert audiences, will sing the role of Carmen on Wednesday night. Marion Attwood, one of the present sopranos of the Metropolitan is loaned by Gatti-Casazza for "La Boheme" on Thursday night, and for the part of Nedda in "Pagliacci" on the following Thursday. Mme. Attwood gained fame as "prima donna of the A. E. F." at a time when she was pursuing her operatic studies in Europe.

* * *

ON Friday night, a singer whose voice is familiar to millions, but who has not been seen in Boston, will be heard in the role of Rosina in "Barber of Seville," with Amato as the irrepressible Figaro. She is Beatrice Belkin, known to radio audiences the length and breadth of the land for the beauty of her coloratura singing.

Saturday's matinee brings the fifth of the week's prime donne in the tiny person of Hizi Koyke, 25-year-old Japanese soprano, who sings the role of Mme. Butterfly in which she made her operatic debut in Boston three years ago. On Saturday night, Mme. Lissetskaya and Messrs. Radaelli and Amato will be heard in "Aida."

Wins at War Yet Loses Heart

GLENN HUNTER

NONE BUT THE brave deserves the fair. So Mr. Hunter, having been a brave soldier in the trenches, merits the love he seeks in "Waterloo Bridge" at the Tremont.

Still in the Ring

Eddie Cantor in "Whoopee" at the Colonial. (Second week.) Mr. Cantor frolics through the colorful Southwest with words and music.

* * *

"Woof Woof" at the Majestic. (Second week.) Covers about everything in musical comedy from the theater's backstage to Mobile Bay.

* * *

Walter Woolf in "The Duchess of Chicago" at the Shubert. (Second week.) The principal baritone is himself again.

* * *

"Waterloo Bridge" at the Tremont. (Third week.) Modest soldier boy in romantic adventure with 'ady of loose morals.

* * *

"Murder on the 2nd Floor" at the Copley. (Fourth week.) Another boarding house mystery.

* * *

"Journey's End" at the Wilbur. (Fifth week.) Not so much a play of war as a play of human beings in the war.

The New Play

HOLLIS—"Meteor," a play by S. N. Behrman. First of the Theater Guild's productions to reach Boston this season. The story is said to be a mixture of grim, sardonic humor and ironic tragedy. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne have the principals' roles; others in the cast are Douglas Montgomery, Shirley O'Hara, Lawrence Leslie, Edward Emery, Martin Berkeley and Leonard Loan. Settings by Raymond Rouey; staged by Philip Moeller.

Ma's Ever So Cross With Dearie

SARAH EDWARDS AND MARY EATON

THE MOTHER ROLE in "Glorifying the American Girl" at the Washington St. Olympia and Uptown gives Miss Edwards the chance to "pick on" Miss Eaton. The scenes are quite tearful, alas!

Gets His Bearings With Pep

HELEN WARE AND VICTOR POTEL

IF MR. POTEL DIDN'T know his onions before, he now has learned his lesson well. For Miss Ware tells him where he gets off in "The Virginian" at the Scollay. She omits the flowers, too.

STAGE AND SCREEN

They Lock the Door on the Untamed Heroine in a Darkened Room When the Sunny Side's Up Half Way to Heaven

"BUDDY" ROGERS AND JEAN ARTHUR
HE'S LAYING DOWN the law of Cupid's game. Miss Arthur is worrying about something in "Half Way to Heaven" at the Metropolitan.

JOAN CRAWFORD
MISS CRAWFORD has the stellar part in "Untamed" at Loew's Orpheum. She's a jungle girl. Quite wild at times.

JANET GAYNOR, EL BRENDEL, MARJORIE WHITE, F. RICHARDSON
MR. BRENDEL IS evidently suspicious of the stuff in the bottles. But Miss Gaynor, Miss White and Mr. Richardson don't show sorrow in this scene from "Sunny Side Up" at the New B. F. Keith's.

EVELYN BRENT
AT LAST STARDOM falls to Miss Brent. She is in "Darkened Rooms" at the Fenway. Clever actress is she.

ROD LA ROCQUE, BARBARA STANWYCK
MR. LA ROCQUE drinks his cup to one made up of loveliness alone. Namely, Miss Stanwyck. They're in "The Locked Door" at State.

THEY'RE SAYING IT WITH SONGS FOR A BIG 'CLICK'

By HARLEIGH SHULTZ

YOUTH will have its fling. Up at the Metropolitan, "Buddy" Rogers and Jean Arthur do their flinging on the flying trapezes, in "Half Way to Heaven," while at the New B. F. Keith's no less a pair of screen sweethearts than our own Charlie Farrell and Janet Gaynor have their fling in words and music. It's a gay film life, these days, with variety the very spice of that life.

* * *

WHEN Charlie was here a few weeks ago, he entertained some of his friends with odds and ends about pictures. Then somebody sprung a question aimed at his vocal powers. The talk had turned on his latest appearance with Miss Gaynor, "Sunny Side Up"—of all things, a musical comedy! Could it be that Charlie had scored the hit as a singer that people were telling about. Just to oblige, Charlie did sing for his guests two of the numbers were from this production. And lo and behold, he did them well, so all doubts about his unexpected talent vanished. "I hope you will all see the picture," was his comment, "and I hope you will like it. I'll tell you that Miss Gaynor is splendid in it. "Which makes us think that all Walpole, where Charlie first saw the light of day, and all Cape Cod, where Charlie spent some years, will come up to Keith's to see their famous friend in action.

Charles Farrell

* * *

IN addition to Charlie and Janet, the cast has that notable humorist, El Brendel, ever to be remembered for his work on stage and screen to date. This Nordic comedian has the knack of tickling one's ribs incessantly; his every look is a laugh, almost. Others supporting the stars are Sharon Lynn, Frank Richardson, Marjorie White and Joe Brown.

* * *

THE feature film at the Metropolitan this week is based on the novel, "Hera Comes the Road-Wagon." Young Mr. Rogers, last seen here in "Illusion" in which he was given the part of a magician, reappears, now as an acrobat. That he has won the hearts of the women is shown by the way they turn out when his shadow arrives. This week he is given opportunity to display his manly form; his garb is flesh tights. We won't be caught adding that Miss Arthur doesn't look real cute in her aerial habiliments.

* * *

A GOOD many will want to know who the boy is that adds to the fun in this film. He is Nestor Aber, soph at the Los Angeles high school. Deciding his yen was for the studios, he hied him thither. Opportunity dodged him for a while; then adventure picked his head around the corner at him.

LOAN SETTLES MARY'S FATE

IF it hadn't been for a borrowed $100 bill, Mary Eaton might not be playing the leading role in "Glorifying the American Girl" at the Uptown and Washington St. Olympia.

While Mary and her sister were playing the leading child-roles in "The Bluebird" in stock company in Washington, D. C, their work attracted so much attention that they were given an offer to appear in the same roles in a big road company being assembled in New York. Their mother borrowed $100 to finance the children's trip to the metropolis. It was this journey which paved the way to Mary Eaton's debut as premier danseuse of the Ziegfeld "Follies."

When Paramount decided to film "Glorifying the American Girl," Miss Eaton was chosen as the logical actress to play the leading role in this lavish musical spectacle, which was produced under the personal supervision of Florenz Ziegfeld, the original glorifier of American womanhood.

Besides Miss Eaton there are many other actors and actresses in the dazzling production who have gained fame under the direction of Ziegfeld. In a highly diverting revue sequence of the picture, personal performances by Eddie Cantor, Helen Morgan and Rudy Vallee are seen and heard.

A SPECTACULAR outdoors action scene in which 300 head of bellowing cattle swim across the swirling current of the Stanislaus river in California, is one of the big features of "The Virginian," now at the Scollay.

The crossing was made at Byrne's Ferry, 20 miles from Sonora, mining town in California's "Mother Lode." Seven cameras and a battery of microphones recorded the action and sound.

When the mechanical and electrical equipment had been installed at vantage points along the river bank, a group of cowboys, responding to a signal from Victor Fleming, the director, stampeded the protesting cattle into the swift stream. The herd milled and turned, eventually striking out for the far shore. The swift current carried most of the beeves and the mounted riders 200 yards downstream before the objective was reached.

Directors Now Lined Up Among the Actors

Two directors play supporting roles to Evelyn Brent's lead in her first starring picture, "Darkened Rooms," based on the novel by Sir Philip Gibbs, now at the Fenway.

E. H. Calvert, Paramount character player, was one of the leading screen directors a decade ago. He plays Doris Hill's father in Miss Brent's production.

Wallace MacDonald for two years prior to the advent of talking pictures was a free lance director and has a number of successful major productions to his credit. He has the role of Bert Nelson in "Darkened Rooms."

WANTS LINGO IN LEXICON

INA CLAIRE, stage star, now to be seen in her first Pathe talking picture, a screen version of her play success, "The Awful Truth," at the Park, has decided that someone should compile a Hollywood dictionary for the benefit of unsuspecting Broadwayites who are finding their way into the movies. "English isn't what it used to be on the studio sets," says Miss Claire.

Ina Claire

"An 'ashcan' becomes a great big light, a 'nigger' is black board or canvas on a big frame and a 'broad' isn't the kind of 'broad' you know on Broadway—it's just nother light. Even beef isn't beef any more. Someone yells 'beef on the piano' and five or six baldies pick up the baby grand and move it half way across the lot."

THIBAUD FINE SOLOIST AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

JACQUES THIBAUD, as violin soloist, and Richard Burgin, as conductor in place of Serge Koussevitzky, take this week's Boston Symphony concerts out of the routine. Soloists, especially those of M. Thibaud's stamp, are none too common at these concerts, and they are the more welcome when they come.

It is probably more than a coincidence that Mr. Koussevitzky decided to "rest" when a violinist was scheduled for assisting artists. For Mr. Burgin, concert master of the orchestra, has in the past conducted with a fellow-violinist at his side. Yesterday between conductor and soloist, the Saint-Saens B Minor Concerto was given new life. M. Thibaud's silken tone, his faultless artistry, his aristocracy of style, are an old story. Mr. Burgin's support with the orchestra was, to say the least, sympathetic. And the performance was the more notable in that, we understand, there had been no rehearsal with the soloist. The audience was so enthusiastic that if it had been in a New York concert hall it would have cheered.

The concert had other points of interest. Rimsky-Korsakov began it with a Suite from his opera, "Coq d'Or." Borodin's Second Symphony, in B minor, followed. This Russian half of the program was well played by the orchestra. Mr. Burgin has acquired considerable freedom with the baton since his last appearance. He is more confident, more ready to impart his wishes to the men. As a result, Russian music did not sound dull, even though Mr. Koussevitsky was not at hand.

There was one novelty, and it was reserved for the last—a symphonic dance from a recent opera, "The Basque Venus," by Hermann Hans Wetzler, German composer. In a single movement, four dances, Basque fashion, are joined. The music is exhilarating, not to say wild. It is something more than a tour de force, for the native themes are ingeniously developed, with remarkably effective harmonic and orchestral treatment. For once, a novelty was whole-heartedly applauded.

SCHENCK PLANS TALKIE CHAIN FOR EUROPE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30—Joseph Schenck's mission in Europe, although admittedly a business one, has been more or less secret, but from New York comes the information that Mr. Schenck with his own money and with enormous backing of other people, will establish eight sound theaters in Europe. The first three will seat 4000 and will be located in Paris, London and Glasgow. Others will follow.

It is a well known fact that there are not enough theaters to accommodate the output of American talkies now being produced.

Louella O. Parsons

I doubt very much if Mr. Schenck will attempt Germany and for that reason it is almost impossible for any other company to show a sound picture there unless they are released through the Warner Company.

I know that Carl Laemmle, Sr., had planned to make sound pictures in Germany but the difficulty in obtaining them was so great that he decided to make the life of King Ludwig a silent picture.

THE producers these days needn't worry when there is no story in the offing. Why worry when the vault is full of pictures that weren't so good in their silent versions. All any producer needs do is to have all the old-time films run and presto chango he has a fine story.

"Manslaughter," which Cecil De Mille made in 1922 with Leatrice Joy and Thomas Meighan, was considered a pretty good picture for those times. Now it is being brought back and Paramount is going to do a very special with George Abbott directing.

Just a minute while I tell you about another one. Remember "The Virgin of Stamboul" with Priscilla Dean? What a business that picture did. Now, it's to be remade by Universal as a talkie. The dialogue rights have been purchased from H. H. Van Loan.

"SWEET Kitty Bellairs" I believe starred Mae Murray in the days when she was a Paramount star. You know how long ago that is. If I am wrong, stop me. If not read on. "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" has been taken out of moth-balls, dry cleaned, and is now ready for Marian Nixon's first starring vehicle for Warners. Not only is this Miss Nixon's debut as a star, but it will be her first picture since she became Mrs. Edward Hillman, Jr.

"THE SWAN" is completed today and as soon as Lillian Gish ascertains whether there will be any retakes, she returns to New York. Contrary to belief, she is not making any more pictures for United Artists. The taking up of her contract is optional with her and because she has been idle so long she has decided not to make any definite plans until she is sure what she wants to do. She had "The Strange Interlude" within her grasp, papers were all drawn up and ready to be signed when the suit for plagiarism was filed against Eugene O'Neill. All Miss Gish's lawyer had to say to her was "Here is a lawsuit and that was enough." She says the word terrifies her. Miss Gish says now she is glad she didn't buy "The Strange Interlude," because the talkies are not quite ready for it.

THE movies are having a lot of fun with themselves in "The Show Girl of Hollywood," J. P. McEvoy's book. Directors, scenario writers, column writers, are all being kidded mercilessly by Mervyn Le Roy, the director, just as they were in the book. Just as soon as Alice White finishes this picture she will start thinking of "Sweet Mamma," an original written for her by James Starr. If any James walking around the First National lot, feeling happy excepting for the fact that he had put on a lot of pounds he didn't want.

RUPERT HUGHES is of the opinion that Hollywood is the place for people who want to write movies, but that New York is more stimulating for a fiction writer. He believes in New York you come in contact with more people in his particular kind of work and that you can write better.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: William Haines using an atomizer on the set to cure a threatening sore throat. Cecil De Mille on the Buster Keaton set, ready to play a part. Carmel Myers back home rehearsing for her act in vaudeville. Bebe Daniels with her arm in a splint—a sprain. Edward Dougherty, former newspaper man, and now author on the United Artists' lot. Wagers—even money—now being passed whether Harry Richman who is completing his picture, is now engaged to Clara Bow. Gloria Lloyd wondering at her father's voice which came from the screen in "Welcome Danger." Chuck Reisner chuckling over a new contract to direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Pictures—Variety

BOWDOIN—"The Cocoanuts," "So This Is College" and "They Go Boom." Also vaudeville. Starting Dec. 16, "Christmas Present Week."

'FLAPPERS' AT THE GAYETY

LOLA PIERCE will be the featured player of "Flapper Follies," which opens Monday at the Gayety. The whole show is new to the Mutual Circuit, and is full of colorful comedy and dancing. Jack Montague, Billee LaMonte, Madge Vincent and Jack "Tiny" Fuller are other stars. Earl Root is the straight man. Peggy White, blonde soubrette, and George Stellas are two others whose entertaining promises much. Lola Pierce will present her Hawaiian dancing number. Another feature will be the "Flapper Quartet." "The Arts Revue Petite," "The Shadowgraph," "The Holland Mill" and "The Spanish Scene" are some of the unusual specialties. Holub's Gayety jazz orchestra will speed up the performance.

Lola Pierce

Chance Meeting Gave Girl Role in Photoplay

Gwen Lee, blonde member of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's company of stock players, has a featured role in Joan Crawford's first all-talking feature, "Untamed," at Loew's Orpheum the coming week. She was born at Hastings, Neb., and educated at Brownell Hall, an exclusive girls' school in Omaha. At the school she specialized in dramatics and in 1919 appeared on the stage in Omaha in a dance revue.

Film Fare for the New Week

PARK—Ina Claire in "The Awful Truth," with John Roche, Henry Daniel, Theodore Von Eltz, Blanche Frederici. Marshall Neilan directed. A Pathe picture.

Stage Star Headliner at Loew's State Next Week

Lou Holtz, stage star, is announced as the headline attraction at Loew's State beginning Monday. Mr. Holtz is announced as the bridegroom for a wedding next week, the bride-to-be being Frances Upton, beautiful musical comedy star, now appearing in "Whoopee." Mr. Holtz has appeared as the featured comedian in several of George White's "Scandals."

Master of Marionettes Never Tires of Work

Tony Sarg, famed illustrator and marionette impresario, whose show is now at Tremont Temple, was born in Guatemala, and is the son of a former sugar and coffee planter. He was educated in Germany and took up the art of drawing in England, his mother's native country.

MISS SKINNER AT WILBUR

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER comes to the Wilbur for three performances, the first on next Thursday afternoon, with Sunday night, December 8, and Monday afternoon, December 9, to follow. In the space of two short years, the charming daughter of Otis Skinner has forged ahead rapidly. For those who have not seen Miss Skinner, it might be said that her character sketches are really little playlets.

Cornelia Otis Skinner

The range of a Skinner program runs from "Aftermath" to "Homework," a rippling farce-one filled with excellent dramatic values and the other a choice 15 minutes of delightful comedy. Miss Skinner will use for her first show on Thursday afternoon the following program: "The Eve of Departure," "In a Gondola," "A Picnic in Kentucky," "Monte Carlo," "A Lady Explorer," "Aftermath," "Motoring in the 90's," "Strolling Time on the Olympic." The matinees will start at 2:30, and the Sunday night show at 8:30.

Arrives Tomorrow

Beatrice Harrison, the famous English 'cellist, will arrive in Boston tomorrow on the White Star liner Cedric. Miss Harrison has added to her New York and Boston program the composition by General Dawes, orchestrated by Miss Beatrice Harrison's sister.

FEATURE BILL AT HOWARD

THE Howard on Monday will have the famous "Take a Chance" company. The principal roles will be handled by Ina Thomas, Max Coleman, Gaby Fields, Billie O'Neil, Tiny Huff, Charley Grinder, Ralph Poe, Larry Amone and Harry Ryan. This is the organization that boasts of having the prettiest chorus in burlesque.

In addition to the burlesque, the G. E. Lothrop management will provide a good vaudeville and picture bill.

CHORUS UNITS IN CONCERT

A JOINT concert of the Swedish Viking male chorus and the Polish "Lira" mixed chorus will be held tomorrow afternoon, in Jordan Hall with Mrs. W. Nurczynska, soprano, and Tyra Hulten, baritone as soloists. National Swedish and Polish as well as American songs will be included in the program.

The Polish Choir Lira and the Swedish Viking Choir have been several times recipients of first prizes at the International Music and Song Festivals held every Washington's Birthday.

READ
Temperance
—or Prohibition?

This remarkable volume presents, for the first time, an accurate and unbiased cross-section of national thought on the gravest situation facing America since the Civil War.

It is based on the enormous volume of evidence contained in the plans and statements received by the $25,000 Hearst Temperance Contest.

Fascinating as a novel, it is as accurate as a public document. It is impossible to understand the present prohibition situation in this country without reading this remarkable book, written, compiled and edited by Francis J. Tietsort, Editor of Hearst Temperance Contest, aided by a staff of experts.

People of every age, of nearly every nation, of every religion, vocation and social rank have provided material for this astounding revelation of what America really thinks on the subject of Prohibition.

Where Will U. S. Stand Fifteen Years Hence?

Calm Reflection Justifies Faith in Outlook for Common Stocks

By B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—While panic was raging at its fiercest in Wall Street, one of the best known bankers in the country said: "I am satisfied to get through one moment at a time. I am not worrying about tomorrow or the next day. Sufficient for the moment is the trouble thereof."

B. C. Forbes

* * *

If America has solid grounds for feeling optimistic six weeks ago, it has equally solid grounds for feeling optimistic today. If the prospects confronting the majority of American stocks then were favorable, they are equally favorable today—distinctly more so when the drastic fall in their cost is taken into account.

Those who were willing to borrow money at very high rates to buy stocks at very high prices surely should be far more willing to borrow money at very low rates to buy stocks at very low prices.

* * *

Apart from stock quotations and money rates, both of which have become enormously more favorable, the chief change which has taken place is a change in psychology, in the mental attitude of many people. Of course, perhaps three to five per cent of the population are not money in stocks, and part of the purchasing power of this comparatively small proportion of the population has been reduced.

But our great productive powers remain unimpaired. Our natural resources remain unimpaired. The efficiency of our unique transportation system remains unimpaired. The ability and productivity of our unmatched body of workers remain unimpaired. Our monetary and credit supplies have not merely remained unimpaired, but have increased. The ingenuity, energy and enterprise of our industrial, financial and business leaders are not only unimpaired, but today stand at a new high-water mark. Relations between the government and industry have become gratifyingly closer—and even Congress is likely to act somewhat more circumspectly.

* * *

How far will the United States have advanced five years from now, 10 years from now, 15 years from now?

We can best judge the future by taking adequately into the reckoning what has happened in the past. The old-established investment banking house of Hornblower & Weeks has prepared an illuminating table from which the following figures are taken. "All the weaknesses in the current business and financial situation," it points out, "are of temporary character, and all the permanent factors are sound and warrant continued faith in the current and prospective values of securities, representing the ownership of well-managed American railroad, utility and industrial corporations. As a background, showing the only possible trend of general business in this country over any appreciable period of time, we submit the following survey of recent American business history."

Palais D'or Books Another Big Show

Stephen Hung, manager of the Palais D'or restaurant, announces another big show for the coming week.

Jimmie Gallagher will have his old musical comedy partner, George Mack (late of "Follow Thru" company) as co-master of ceremonies. Also on the bill will be Devere & Kiki, Jeanne Winslow, and three other sets on this floor show.

Noon-Day Dancing Popular Feature

One of the most attractive features of The Stella, on Tremont st., is the noon-day luncheon and dancing served between 11:30 and 2:30 each day.

This innovation permits unescorted women to enjoy dancing. The Stella is also offering the highest quality of entertainment, headed by the popular Carl Moore and Billy Payne.

STOCK MARKET CLOSED FOR WEEK-END

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Again the stock market, including Boston, New York and other exchanges, is closed for the week-end, tomorrow terminating the first quadruple holiday in financial history. Monday the exchanges resume the old trading hours with no talk as yet about further shutdowns. This move is expected to add to public confidence, which does not seem very much impaired at the moment, to say the least.

Do not become pessimistic over reports of textile curtailments during the coming month. Statistics show December always "seasonally" quiet in the textile field.

Sir Henri Deterding, who visits the United States at least once a year, is here again. His "business enemies" always give a warm personal welcome to the director general of Royal Dutch. Sir Henri declares the intensive marketing campaign now started on the eastern seaboard is a competition with American oil companies will continue without compromise.

* * *

Oil and gasoline marketing are forever expanding. The West has its gusher cities, and even the East, where oil is not produced, boasts of innumerable service station villages. These are particularly conspicuous along the Newburyport Turnpike, for example. Next year's Turnpike, by the way, will be a greatly improved "edition." The repairs are the most extensive witnessed in years. The long-needed widening plans rather well executed.

Sir Henri Deterding

Reports of excellent trade confound the dismal prophets of hard times. The greatest restaurant chain in the country is having its most prosperous holiday business on record. "Excellent holiday trade in all our stores" is announced by the leading radio chain store from a field where the prophets aforementioned hoped for the worst. The list might be added to indefinitely.

Big copper companies continue to declare dividends, which is indicating directors do not agree with the views of financial district prophets.

The smart spread in call money which has followed stock market liquidation is best illustrated in the renewal rates which are quoted. Which works out at 5.383 per cent. This is the lowest figure since 5.025 per cent in April, 1928, and is lower than the 6.04 per cent average for all of 1928. It is in marked contrast with the high average of 8.552 per cent in March and 9.06 per cent in July.

* * *

It does not fully measure the relaxation, however, for many days toward the end of the month the real level at which transactions were arranged was 3 per cent in the "outside" market, compared with official quotation of 4½ per cent.

Despite the fact that the New York Stock Exchange was closed throughout November on an abbreviated schedule — there being four normal five-hour sessions and 13 three-hour days, with trading omitted every Saturday—volume of trading amounted to 72,454,500 shares. This, of course, represents a heavy reduction from the record monthly turnover of 236,371,410 shares in October. November trading, nevertheless, was the second largest, for any calendar month in the history of the exchange. The record November turnover of 2,154,779,200 shares was established last year.

There has seldom been a time when more diametrically opposed views regarding the future course of business and the stock market were being expressed.

The "Prosperity Drive" news that centers largely around Washington finds enthusiastic support in the Central West and South. On the other hand, the very pessimistic reports from the Eastern centers accuse in Wall Street arouse a good deal of response in New England to the point where the stock market break was felt more severely.

* * *

This week's United Business Service Report of Boston makes an analysis of these two divergent points of view and concludes that the greater improved credit position precludes any reasonable probability of the pessimists being right.

On October 9, brokers' loans stood at $6,804,000,000. By November 20 they had been reduced to $5,587,000,000. The amount of $583,000,000 was clipped off during the week ending November 20, during which time the whole market advanced substantially.

Whoever bought the many millions of shares that were sold, did it largely with their own money. There has been a buyer for every share sold—small buyers — large buyers; thousands of them have paid cash, and the rest hold by reasonably heavy margins. The declining indebtedness even while prices advanced can have no other meaning.

NEW POLICY TO RULE FEDERAL RESERVE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—New and significant attempts are under way to substitute the intelligent discretion of responsible executives in the business world for the automatic working of the force of supply and demand.

President Hoover has put the weight of his great office behind the newer aspirations of economists to modify the business cycle. In effect, the President has told business men that their decisions, not mere forces, are primary causes of prosperity and depression. The large implications of these newer movements to turn the machinery of commerce and finance into tools which serve human aspirations are scarcely realized.

The idea that the banking machine is subject to human manipulation has been seeping into the Federal Reserve System for a considerable period. Formerly, central banks operated almost automatically in accordance with the rise and fall of gold reserves. But America has such a super-abundance of gold that the paradoxical task Reserve System have felt that the old automatic restraints would not be applied. They have substituted banking discretion for the quantity of gold as a basis for policy. This new attitude resembles the "managed currency" system, which John Maynard Keynes has advocated in England as a substitute for the orthodox gold standard.

W. Randolph Burgess, assistant Federal Reserve agent of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in alluding to the new policy pointed out: "The old rules for the banks of issue are not sufficient guides for the new era." Hence the System in its present position. Its gold reserves are so large that the country could be flooded with credit before it became necessary to raise rates to protect reserves. Nor would such overdose the country in a fearful inflation. Clearly some other principles of policy must be developed than that of protecting gold reserves."

* * *

In conceding that the Reserve System has passed to the "managed currency" basis, Dr. Burgess adds: "Thus the Federal Reserve System has a unique responsibility and a unique opportunity. Its policy can be determined not by what it has to do, but what is best to do for the welfare of the country. Discount rates and open market policies can be governed by the needs of trade, and there can be the wisest policy in the best interest of business and trade. In a sense the Federal Reserve System has been sailing upon uncharted seas for its policy could not be determined by the old rules. The question which must be answered is how much credit is to be given the country and what restraint should be put upon its use."

Mr. Burgess thinks the present cheap money policy, Dr. Burgess said: "Any bank of issue is usually working in the direction of departure from public psychology. At times of speculative enthusiasm the bank of issue is always holding back. At times of gloom and pessimism the bank of issue is usually encouraging."

Many a shorn lamb will wonder what to be thankful for. Individually, though deflated, he can be thankful for good health, and for the energy with which to start out anew to build up a personal estate. Socially, he can be thankful for fairly satisfactory crops, and for the absence of pestilence and floods. He can be thankful for international peace. And, as a member of the collective society, he can be thankful that the country is concluding a year of record-breaking prosperity and profits, despite the psychological upset following the speculative cataclysm.

* * *

The almost universal unpopularity of the short seller rests on emotional economics. As a matter of fact, the bear can serve a useful purpose in checking unwarranted optimism. His did not function satisfactorily during the Wall Street boom, largely because during the protracted rise manipulators were able to effect terrible damage on short sellers. Accordingly, they became fearful and timid and as the market reached a peak there was a subnormal short interest.

Then, when the crash came, the cushion of short covering was there to help to stabilize the market. After the hysterical setback the New York Stock Exchange began certain sources in Wall Street arouse a good deal of response in New England to the point where the stock market break was felt more severely.

* * *

This week's United Business Service Report of Boston makes an analysis of these two divergent points of view and concludes that the greater improved credit position precludes any reasonable probability of the pessimists being right.

AT THE DIAL

By THE RADIO EDITOR

MME. EDITH NOYES GREENE, Boston musician and teacher, has arranged a weekly series of "Twilight Musicales," starting her broadcast this afternoon at 5:45 over WBZ-WBZA.

NEAL O'HARA will broadcast from WNAC each Saturday evening at 6:50 during the winter months as a feature of the J. A. program, in conjunction with the J. A. Concert Orchestra. The series starts tonight.

THE program of the Famous Lyric Challenges is devoted to an episode in the life of Ulysses S. Grant. It will be broadcast over WEEI and stations of the National Broadcasting Company at 8 this evening. Grant was graduated very young from West Point. He was not granted a commission in the army because he was regarded as lazy and shiftless. How Grant accepted this challenge and how it resulted in his being raised from obscurity to the Presidency of his country will be told in the Lyric Famous Challenge.

BERNICE TAYLOR, soprano, accompanied by Josef Koestner and his orchestra, will be a highlight of the Launderland Lyrics which will be broadcast from Chicago at 5:30 through WEEI and NBC stations.

The program will present a variety of popular selections, in which Fred Waldner, tenor, will sing with Miss Taylor in two duets, "You're Perfect" and "Just Imagine."

DVORAK'S "Carnival" Overture and Massenet's "Neapolitan Scenes" will contrast with the solemnity of the "Good Friday Spell" and "Parsifal" when Walter Damrosch conducts his symphony orchestra in the General Electric Hour, broadcast through WEEI and NBC Coast-to-Coast System at 9 o'clock. "Good Friday Spell" occurs in the third act of music drama. The music portrays the rites connected with Good Friday in terms of faith, atonement and anguish blended by sound arrangements into a picture.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE, soprano, will be guest of the Gillette program over WNAC at 9:30. She will sing as one of her three numbers, the "Cradle Song," by Brahms. The remaining two will be Padilla's "Estrellita" and "Can It Be Love At Last," from Fiddlers Three. Miss Dragonette will be accompanied by Abel Baer's orchestra, conducted by Don Voorhees. Among the orchestral numbers will be "Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries," from Die Walkure.

THE OVERTURE to Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" will be played by the Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Henry Hadley, during the Eastman Kiddie Hour broadcast, over WNAC and the Columbia System, at 9:30. Other selections to be heard include the "Aida March," by Verdi, a symphonic paraphrase on Swift's "Can't We Be Friends," and Grainger's "Molly On the Shore."

ONE OF THE most interesting in the series of grand opera broadcasts from Chicago is being passed up tonight by WBZ. The entire second act of Wagner's "Walkure" will go on the air, starting at 10 o'clock. This may be heard through WJZ by those who have good sets and who are theatrically inclined. A couple of weeks ago the gorgeous broadcast of Bellini's "Norma" was cut in two by the local station, Boston listeners receiving only the second half-hour. Fortunately, this portion contained the magnificent duet between Norma and Adalgisa, instead of the full 32 minutes of sustained singing. Nothing quite like this has come over the air in the decade of radio history.

AT LEAST FOUR principal singers from the new Boston Grand Opera Company, which opens in the Opera House next Monday night, will be on the air from 11 p. m. until midnight tonight, broadcasting to Commander Byrd in the Antarctic Circle. The broadcast will be from WJZ's studios to WGY's short wave transmitter. The singers are Anne Lindenhaus, dramatic soprano; Dorothy Spears, lyric soprano; Giuseppe Radaelli, dramatic tenor, and Henri Scott, basso. The program sponsors hope to have Eddie Cantor and several other stars from local theaters.

"Mickie" Alpert

"Mickie" Alpert Popular Figure

"Mickie" Alpert is adding to his reputation by the splendid manner in which he presides as master of ceremonies at the Copley Grande Grove. "Mickie" also contributes substantial portion of the evening's entertainment since with his song hits, Jacques Renard wields his magic baton over his Cocoanut Grove recording orchestra. Renard is among the most popular conductors of the East.

Blind Legion Officer Urges Preparedness in U. S.

Air Romance, Better Than "Chickie"

What Has Happened

MARY PATRICIA DAWN, beautiful, young brunette, meets the lad of her dreams in the person of Guy Elliott, aviator. Guy is developing a perfect airplane in the plant of old William Bryce. Happy days follow with Pat and Guy in love. Then comes Barbara Bryce, young widow of Bryce's son, with her seductive lure. Later Guy receives a visit from Barbara and her young son, upon whom old Bryce squanders a fortune. Tom Burns, a workman, rages about the unfairness of wealth. His invalid son is dying for want of necessities. When Bryce refuses a loan, Burns swears revenge. He robs the office safe and is captured after a gun fight. Preparations are being made for Pat to enter college. Hearing much gossip about the youth of today, Mrs. Dawn prays that Pat will remain the sweet girl she is. Pat's father dies and Mrs. Dawn gives her life savings to Bryce to invest, but Guy gets them back. Bryce stops financing the plane factory.

CHAPTER 24

THE man's face flashed white in the dark.

"You've taken the wrong plane," Pat screamed above the roar of the engine. "This is Mr. Elliott's.

"Be quiet. I know. I'm taking you to Elliott."

"Opened? Where is he?"

The wind blew the cry back to her. The zoom of the plane drowned it. But she clung to the seated and shouted, frantic:

"Where is he? What has happened?"

Words blew against her ears. She caught a fragment.

"Hurt! Be quiet and help!"

"But WHERE? In this dark —WHEN—"

She started climbing to the cockpit The plane banked sharply. Then the man at the controls shouted:

"Get back! Stay back!"

Pat's terror, was congealed like this—a blank, icy terror. Taking her by force, and for some unknown pilot was speeding her to him. But why? And where could he be that Guy must rush to him like this, a pair of criminals flying through the inky night?

Suddenly she remembered the man's wild start when she climbed up and touched his shoulder; when she called, "Guy!" He had gone pale with shock as though a ghost had sat him from the cabin.

He was taking her to Guy! She closed her eyes while little arrows of panic flew through every nerve.

Was he stealing Guy's plane? What would he do with her? She sat with her cold hands frozen together and her mind pitifully summoning courage. She prayed. She thought of her father and clung to his image as though Richard would come out of the night and protect her.

It was blinding dark now.

On and on. She grew used to the darkness, to the encompassing blindness. She dreaded the moment when they would stop.

They were coming down. Just above the mountain tops and now swinging over valleys.

Now the trees were above them. Landing—the wheels touched ground. Pat's heart darted to her throat. She pounded there crazily.

In another moment she would open the cabin and go plunging madly desperately across this field.

The man in the cockpit called out. He turned with an abrupt, lightning move:

"Look—over there!"

She gave a start, saw his arm raised, saw a thing that was long and black in his upraised hand. It came crashing with a deadening blow full on Pat's head.

* * *

Laura Dawn walked uneasily about the living room. From the kitchen came annoying sounds—the whacking of a spoon against a saucepan, a clatter of dishes, then a slapping of hands on something that gave back a thuddy echo.

She went to the door and said a bit sharply:

"It's time you were in bed."

Dickie gave her a wide, aggrieved look:

"Gee whiz! Just finished. You said I could stay up!"

"I thought they'd be here before this. It's nearly nine. We can't start a game this late."

"Well she promised. And she better get here. Told me if I'd make the pancho and have it chock full of nuts and no shells left in that she'd get here. She'll be good and sorry if she doesn't do it."

At 10 o'clock Laura said limply:

"Perhaps they've gone to a movie. Go to bed, Dickie."

The boy fidgeted and stalled. He picked up a book. He went out to see if the candy was still creamy. And at 10:30 he came stealthily back down the stairs. He was in the room before Laura heard him:

"Say—I'd ring up if I were you. Can't tell . . . maybe something happened."

"Nothing happened," said Laura in a voice of sharp alarm. "I remember now they spoke about seeing 'The Crowd.'"

But 15 minutes later Laura called Guy's workroom. No answer. She called Mills Field. After a long,

TO HARNESS HEAT 5 MILES INSIDE EARTH

Prof. Shapley of Harvard Plans Study of "Drifting Continent"

Prof. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatory, has decided it is about time man began to peel the orange upon which he has lived for countless centuries.

Prof. Shapley comes forward with a vision of subterranean laboratories deep in the bowels of the earth wherein the problems of geophysics that still puzzle scientists might quickly be solved.

There is the problem of the floating continent, for instance. According to the Taylor Wegener hypothesis, North America, South America, Europe and Africa, in the dim ages of the past, were all one.

Gradually through millions of years the Americas have drifted away from the mother continent.

MAY BE DRIFTING YET.

"There is no reason to suppose," said Prof. Shapley, "that they have stopped drifting. Nevertheless the drift is so infinitesmal that it is impossible to determine accurately with our present equipment. Such a drift might readily be studied from the bottom of a shaft dug several miles into the earth's crust and charted accurately."

For ages, Professor Shapley points out, man has been studying the surface of the earth, the sun, the moon, the stars, the planets. With highpowered telescopes on mountain-top observatories, astronomers have peered out millions of light-years into space. And a flight-year, for those who do not already know, is the distance light will travel in a year at the rate of 186,000 miles a second.

Yet, with all this study, Professor Shapley said today, man has no more than scratched the surface of the planet upon which he lives.

IDEA DREAM FOR YEARS.

Professor Shapley's idea of subterranean laboratories—"plutonic laboratories" he calls them—is a dream that he has had for years, but one to which he has given no public utterance until now.

The engineering difficulties of such a project would be tremendous, he said, but they have been gone into extensively by John L. Hodgeson, assistant in the Mechanical Institute of Civil Engineers, and by Sir Charles Parsons, one of the foremost engineers of Great Britain.

The project would consist of a vertical shaft sunk into the earth's crust as engineering ingenuity could sink it. The shaft would be located preferably on the edge of a "continental shelf," which is the scientific name for seacoast.

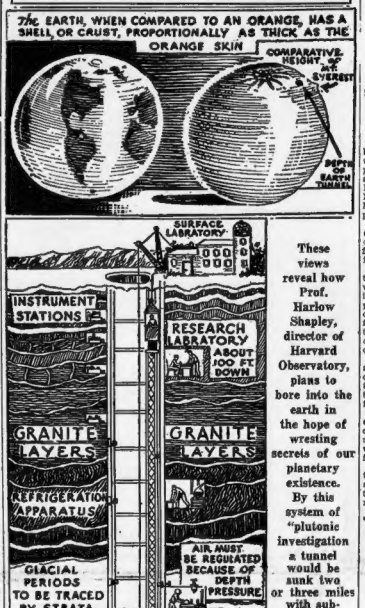
It would be dug beside one of the world's great universities in order that the research workers could have a close contact with an important institution of learning.

At the surface would be a giant refrigerating machines to pump freezing mixtures toward the center of the earth in order to make the underground laboratories tenable in the experiments.

Prof. Shapley pointed out that there is increase of one degree Fahrenheit for every 76 feet of depth of five miles," he said, "the temperature would be several hundred degrees."

Evaporation of liquid air would furnish a large portion of the refrigeration, but at great depths the air pressure itself would be so great that liquid air would not evaporate.

Bare Secrets of Earth



THE EARTH, WHEN COMPARED TO AN ORANGE, HAS A SHELL, OR CRUST, PROPORTIONALLY AS THICK AS THE ORANGE SKIN
COMPARATIVE HEIGHT OF MT. EVEREST
DEPTH OF EARTH TUNNEL
SURFACE LABRATORY
INSTRUMENT STATIONS
RESEARCH LABRATORY ABOUT 100 FT. DOWN
GRANITE LAYERS
REFRIGERATION APPARATUS
GRANITE LAYERS
AIR MUST BE REGULATED BECAUSE OF DEEP PRESSURE
GLACIAL PERIODS TO BE TRACED BY STRATA
TEMPERATURE, COLD ROCK, STRATA BETRAYING WHERE GLACIER ONCE RESTED
WARM STRATA INDICATING FORMER STRETCH OF WARM WEATHER.

These views reveal how Prof. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory, plans to bore into the earth in the hope of wresting secrets of our planetary existence. By this system of "plutonic investigation a tunnel would be sunk two or three miles with subterranean laboratories. One thing Prof. Shapley hopes to determine is whether North and South America and Europe and Africa were once one continent.

NEW GAS RATES APPROVED FOR 2 COMPANIES

Suburban and Malden and Melrose Are Allowed 50-Cent Service Charge

With a substantial reduction in base rates applied for, the public utilities commission today approved a service charge of 50 cents a months for the Suburban Gas & Electric Light Company, serving Revere and Winthrop, and the Malden & Melrose Gas Light Company, effective Jan. 1.

The two companies at the present time are charging a flat rate of 75 cents a 100 cubic feet for the first 1400 feet sold, and 12½ cents for gas in excess of that amount.

They petitioned for a change in their rate structures so that they would be allowed to impose a service charge of 50 cents a month, plus a commodity charge of 20 cents per 100 cubic feet for the first 600 feet, 10 cents per 100 for the next 9000, and 9 cents per 100 cubic feet for all gas used in excess of 10,000.

In its order today, the commission allows the service charge of 50 cents, but reduced the base charges to 12 cents per 100 cubic feet for the first 2000 and 11½ cents per 100 for all gas in excess.

The company proposes to put into effect an optional rate for domestic customers, under which those using more than 3200 cubic feet a month will pay 9 cents per 100 cubic feet for all gas in excess of that amount.

With this optional plan in effect the commission believes the rates approved will yield approximately the same revenue as under existing rates.

THOMAS LYFORD DIES SUDDENLY

Thomas Lyford of 11 Alton pl, Brookline, died suddenly at his home this morning. Mr. Lyford was a member of the board of directors of William Filene's Sons Company, with which firm he had been connected for 28 years, as fur buyer and divisional merchandise manager. He was one of the outstanding figures in the fur industry and one of the organizers of the Boston Fur Club, of which he had been president since its formation.

Mr. Lyford was 55 years old and was born in Sebec Station, Me. He is survived by his wife, Bessie Pinberg Lyford, and one daughter, Barbara, seven, and by two brothers, Edward Lyford of Sebec Station, Me., and John Lyford of Chicago.

Reading Over His Speech

PLEADS FOR UNIVERSAL SERVICE

Well-Trained Civilians Vital in Time of War, He Says

"Most of the world is blind as regards peace—and deaf, too. If people could see the big things in life and overlook the trifles, such as a blind man has to do, they could see the self-evident truth that the greatest preventive of war is adequate preparedness."

The man who spoke these words was Frank Schoble, Jr., national vice-commander of the American Legion, who is one of the two living officers of the A. E. F. blinded by shell fire in action in the World War.

Vice-Commander Schoble is here to win more support for immediate increase of hospitalization for disabled war veterans. He will be the chief speaker at the state dinner of the "Forty and Eight" at the Statler tonight.

And when this tall, fair haired officer with the distinguished bearing and the extraordinary clarity of vision peculiar to the physically blind speaks, his word carry conviction.

URGES UNIVERSAL SERVICE

"I have infinite hope for the future of this country," Schoble went on. "We should have a comprehensive program of national defense that includes universal service. Having been taken out of business on the spur of the moment when the call of war came and having fought a war with insufficient equipment and insufficiently trained men who gave their lives at the front, I am the strongest possible advocate of adequate preparedness."

"This preparedness is not only trained army and navy but trained civilians, who give equal service in time of war with the soldier in the field," he explained.

"The American Legion feels so strongly on this point that it in second only to its program of rehabilitation and welfare," Schoble said, "and I believe that the time is coming when we shall have a system under which capital and labor at home will be playing their part with equal service with the soldier in the field and with profit to none. The first step has been taken toward this with the Reed-Wainwright resolution for the establishment of a commission to study this problem. This will come before Congress this session."

MASTERED BRAILLE SYSTEM

Schoble mastered the Braille system while in hospitals after being wounded on October 5, 1918, while leading his platoon of the 318th Infantry of the 80th Division in the Argonne. He spoke enthusiastically of the new system of comic weekly written in Braille and impresses visitors with his keen sense of humor and independence of action and thought. He usually travels alone and his itinerary while in New England includes daily trips to such posts as Portland and Augusta, Me., Worcester, Springfield, Pittsfield, Providence, Hartford, Ct., Rutland and Barre, Vt., and Keene, N. H., where he speaks on a 10-day tour of this part of his territory.

Schoble, though not a Catholic, was specially blessed by the Pope when the American Legion commander visited the Vatican two years ago. He has a niece, Miss Belle Schoble at school at Dana Hall, Wellesley, whom he visites today.

He will be the guest of Mayor Quinn and officers of the Cambridge Post at a luncheon at the Hotel Commander tomorrow and opens the speaking tour Monday evening, before the Middlesex County Council at Townsend.

While here the blind vice-commander is being escorted about by John D. Crowley, Grand Chef de Gare, Massachusetts department, Forty and Eight Society.

Buddies to Honor Leonard Nason

Leonard H. Nason, author of "Chevrons," "Three Lights on a Match," "The Man in the White Slicker" and other war-time stories, will be honored by his comrades, veterans of the 5d Division, U. S. Regulars, A. E. F., at the Elks Hotel tonight.

More than 500 veterans of the New England contingent of the division have been invited.

Costs $1300 in Court to Win $650 at Poker

Benjamin Novak of Rutland sq., South End, found guilty on Wednesday of winning more than $5 at poker, was ordered in Municipal Court today to forfeit twice the amount of his winnings, or $1300.

Judge James H. Devlin overruled Atty. Patrick H. Kelly and declared he had jurisdiction to send Novak to jail for 2600 days if he did not put up the money. He said that at the end of three months, Novak could then appear before the court, take the poor debtor's oath and be discharged.

The defendant appealed, was held in $500, and on leaving court was re-arrested by Inspector Timothy Donovan on a complaint from Worcester court charging him with winning more than $500. The complaint was signed by John J. Condon of Holden.

Atty Kelly contended the court had no jurisdiction to impose a sentence of 2600 days on his client in lieu of payment of twice his winnings, which were $650.

Judge Devlin said the law was mandatory that a defendant forfeit twice the amount of his winnings, and added that any criticism should be directed to the Legislature, Beth Israel Hospital ture.

10 Days' Sentence for Failure to Pay Wages

Judge Ralph W. Reeve in Lynn court today sentenced to 10 days each William Carswell and Samuel Davis, president and treasurer, respectively, of Yale Shoe Co., for having failed to pay two weeks' wages to Samuel Sherman of Malden.

The defendants denied Sherman's testimony and produced witnesses who said the factory was closed at the time Sherman alleged he was engaged to make the samples for a stipulated salary of $50 a week. Both appealed and were held in $500.

Leaves Painting of Madonna to Harvard

The painting of a Madonna now in Fogg Museum, Cambridge, which she loaned the institution, is left to Harvard University in the will of Mrs. Edith E. Forbes of Newton, filed in Dedham Probate Court today. The painting will remain in the museum.

Sums totaling $40,000 were willed to relatives and friends and $10,000 was left to public institutions. The residue, after $50 a month income is provided for her brother, Edward W., is to be handled by the trustees and executors and divided among her children.

North End Post to Hold Dance Party

A dancing party will be held in The Tent, Monday evening, by North End Post, No. 53, American Legion. The committee in charge consists of George Constanzo, chairman; Anthony Bernardo, Stephen Forti, Charles Gardello, Miss Mary Marto, Mrs. Nicholas Sciarrillo and Miss Margaret Prezzio.

Summer St. Grease Fire Blocks Traffic

Traffic was jammed for 10 minutes in Summer and Otis sts. at noon when a grease flue in the Alpha restaurant caught fire and belched forth heavy clouds of smoke. The damage by smoke and water was estimated at about $100.

Hub Jewry in Mass Meeting Tomorrow

A call has been issued to Boston Jewry to take part in a mass meeting to be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Temple Ohabei Shalom Community Center, Beacon and Marshal sts., Brookline, to discuss the situation of the 21 constituent organizations of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies. There will be no solicitation of funds.

Louis E. Kirstein, former president of the Federated Jewish Charities will preside, and among the speakers will be: Hon. A. C. Ratshesky; Judge A. K. Cohen, president of the Federated; Sydney Dreyfus, chairman of campaign; Rabbi Harry Levi, of Temple Israel; Dr. Charles Willnsky, superintendent, Beth Israel Hospital.

RUNYON SAYS

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—Jerome Beatty, who used to write sports for the old Evening Mail, and then hid out in the movie racket for years, has scored a phenomenal success as a fiction writer the past year.

Charley Coe, the writer of underworld tales, has gone to Europe with Leon Errol, the comedian, to see if he can find a heavyweight prospect.

Les Marriner, the former University of Illinois football player, who broke a hand for the sixth time while fighting George Hoffman in Chicago recently, apparently has the most brittle dukes of any heavyweight since old Bob Fitzsimmons, though Napoleon Jack Dorval, with five breaks, runs him a close second.

Walter St. Denis, public relations counsel of Madison Square Garden, now has a suite of offices on the 50th st. side, and is arranging a housewarming just prior to the Phil Scott-Otto von Porat battle on the night of December 9.

Herman "Muggsy" Taylor, of the firm of Gunnias and Taylor, who are promoting the Schmeling-Somebody fight at Atlantic City in February, was in New York last week arranging his preliminary card, which will include many of the famous blood sweating behemoths of the period.

Tiny Jim Herman, who is now up to about a ton, and who was a famous heavyweight warrior of the West in his day, goes around seconding Meyer Knockout Christner, the Ohio gladiator.

Frank McManus, who spends these days attending the trial of his brother, George, has a swell tenor voice, and has turned down many an offer to warble professionally.

Charley Walber, who ran a famous restaurant at Essington, on the Delaware, outside Philly, for year, has bought a big farm on the eastern shore of Maryland, near Chesterton, for a club.

Colonel Tillinghast L'Hommedieu Huston, former partner with Col. Jake Ruppert in the ownership of the Yanks, who now spends his days and plenty of his money on an island in the Altamaha river, hard by Brunswick, Ga., came north last week to attend the celebration of the 60th birthday of Col. Boseman Bulger, the baseball scribe.

Mike Jacobs, the ticket broker, has bought the first ticket for the Phil Scott-Otto von Porat fight at Madison Square Garden the night of Dec. 9, paying $100 for a $12 card, and he has promised not to scalp the ducket.

"Titanic Slim" Thomas, one of the star witnesses in the trial of George McManus, is in the money, because any time "Ty" is out of the money he gets great hollows under his eyes. Now his face is almost pouchy, indicating affluence.

William Oswald McGeehan, one of the greatest sports commentators that ever pecked at a typewriter, is all stretched out like Romeo Rojas after taking a punch on the chin, the McGeehan difficulty being a bad carburator, though that doesn't prevent him from turning out his scintillating columns. William Oswald lives on Columbia Heights, in Brooklyn.

Billy Carey, president of Madison Sq. Garden, spent Thanksgiving Day in his office considering an engineering problem of building a railroad in the Argentine.

George Underwood, well-known New York boxing writer, will be in charge of the publicity for the Atlantic City battle in February in which Herr Max Schmeling will be a principal and will shortly open an office at the shore.

William Muldoon, the noblest Roman of them all, takes great pride in the fact that he can again shake hands with his right fist, which was out of commission for a long time as a result of an accident.

FOUR STALWARTS WHO STARRED IN HOLY CROSS-EAGLES TILT TODAY

Tigers Meet Arrows on Garden Ice

PHILADELPHIA ARROWS, a team composed largely of players familiar to Boston fans, will make their season's debut in the Hub tonight when they meet the Tigers in the Garden.

The Arrows, after a somewhat rocky start in the Canadian-American League, have started to click, and in their last game defeated the powerful New Haven Eagles, 4 to 2.

Tigers will go into the game in better condition than on Thanksgiving night, when they fell before Springfield Indians in the Garden. Manager Eddie Powers attributes the team's inability to score on that occasion to the fact it had played a very rough game the preceding night with Providence Reds in Providence.

The players now have had 48 hours of rest and are expected to go after the Arrows with all their old fire and scoring ability. In the only previous game between the Tigers and Arrows, the Boston team won, 7 to 3. That was in Philadelphia the first week of the season.

Tigers came through their tough early week campaign without injury, and the usual first-string lineup will take the ice at the start of hostilities.

"Mush" Roberts, who broke into hockey with the B. A. A., and was with the Bruins two seasons, will be in the Philadelphia nets. He is a Somerville boy and one of the few Jewish players in professional hockey.

The Arrows are managed by Herb Gardiner, who as a defense man of Les Canadiens, was voted the most valuable player in the National League two years ago.

Another large crowd is expected. Hundreds of visitors to Boston, in town for the Boston College-Holy Cross football game, have planned to stay for the evening to attend the hockey game. Members of both football squads have been invited and box seats have been set aside for them.

Yale Squad Cut to 25, Resumes Work

New Haven, Nov. 30—After the first cut in the Yale varsity hockey squad of 35 candidates, 25 reported to Coach Larry Noble for the first practice after the Thanksgiving recess. Of these, 19 are veterans and six played on last year's freshman team.

Among the varsity veterans who survived the cut were: Palmer, Lacs, Austen, McLennan, Bent and McLauchlan, wings; Capt. Wilson, Jennison, Snead, Hickok, West, Schley and Winter, defense; Stoddard, Cookman, Cruickshank and Strange, centers, and Sizer and Farrel, goalies.

From last year's freshmen are Bostwick, Mills and Muhlfeld, wings; Eglehart and Todd, defense, and Curtiss, goal.

Fittons and 'Peres' in Sunday Tilts

Semi-pro football is expected to sing its swan song tomorrow.

The Fittons of East Boston and the Dilboys of Somerville will play at Dilboy Field, Somerville, and the Pere Marquettes will play their second game of the season with the University of Peabody at Peabody.

The Dilboys hope to beat the Noddle Islanders and will rely on "Fish" Ellis and Tom Smith and other college stars to lend them to victory against the East Boston eleven.

Madison Sayles, Rusty Yarnell, Cari Etelman, and former Harvard, Boston College and Tufts players are on the Fitton roster.

Boston Y Harriers in Title Run Dec. 1

Huntington ave. branch of the Boston Y. M. C. A. cross-country squad will compete in the New England A. A. A. U. cross-country championship to be held on December 1, at Franklin Park, according to announcement by Coach Bill Mulgren.

Boston entries will include William Gilbert, captain of last year's harriers of the University of Toronto; Gower Stone, former Canadian star distance runner; Thomas Kobchick, former Mass. Aggie harrier; W. G. Spielberg, formerly of the Munich A. C., Germany, and Andrew Guyda, Y varsity distance runner.

TICKNOR IS PICKED ON 'ALL' TEAM

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Sun today named its 1929 All-American eleven, an alternate eleven and 100 players with "All-American rating."

The Sun experts inclined to the opinion that Glassgow was the outstanding back of the year and Cannon of Notre Dame the outstanding lineman.

The first team gets the Sun's watches, awarded annually. The other players receive medals. The Middle West places five men on the first team, the East four, the Southwest one and the West coast one. The first and second teams:

FIRST TEAM

Schoonover, Arkansas, le.
Nagurski, Minnesota, lt.
Schwartz, California, lg.
Ticknor, Harvard, c.
Cannon, Notre Dame, rg.
Voight, Purdue, rt.
Donchess, Pittsburgh, re.

BRUINS BATTLE PIRATE SIX

Pittsburgh, Nov. 30—The Boston Bruins and Pittsburgh Pirates will meet here tonight in their first game this season, and that contest, one of a quartet to be played in the National League this evening may enable the Bruins to regain first place which they lost when they were idle and Rangers defeated the Chicago Blackhawks.

The Rangers play Detroit tomorrow night, while the Bruins are playing Chicago at Chicago. The other three games in the major league circuit tonight schedule Montreal at Ottawa, the New York Americans and Les Canadiens at Montreal and Detroit at Toronto.

The Bruins arrived with full strength, Eddie Shore being due to resume playing tonight, though he will carry traces of his injuries against Montreal for many days. Harry Oliver also is back in the fold after being out of the game for two weeks, because of an attack of grippe.

Oliver will be back at right wing, and Shore and Capt. Hitchman probably will alternate at right defense with George Owen playing through at left defense. Hitchman has a broken rib, but he will continue to play, being protected by a special harness.

When the Bruins return home they will have nothing to look forward to but a Tuesday night game with the colorful French team, Les Canadiens. Canadiens are away to a nice start in the Canadien division race, having been defeated but once in six starts. They have scored 23 goals to opponents 13 and are playing more open hockey than a year ago.

Prout A. A. Tackles St. Joe's Tomorrow

The Prout A. A. of the West End will play the St. Joseph T. A. B. of West End on the Boston Common tomorrow, in its last game of season.

IOWA IS SEEKING READMISSION

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 30 (INS)—Their petition asking reinstatement completed, University of Iowa officials are confident today that before next week is over the faculty committee of the Western Conference will see their side of the story and lay aside the ousted that has haunted the Corn State school.

Although the contents of the petition have not been revealed and will not be until the Big Ten meeting at Chicago, one week from tonight, it is understood that enough evidence is furnished in the document to convince the conference that the required changes have been made since the action was first announced last May.

Dr. Edward Lauer, present athletic director, states that in view of developments here the conference committee can do nothing else but welcome Iowa back into the group.

Tufts Hoopsters to Report Dec. 2

The Tufts basketball men will report to Coach Lew Manley for the first time, Monday, December 2.

Prospects are unusually bright for a successful season, with Capt. Horton, Warren and Butters of last year's crack team as a nucleus for another winning combination. Fitch, Merchant, Curtis, Ruggiero, Rose, Story, Lopiea and Haber are members of last year's squad who will report for the first practice, with Beatty, Cochran, Fine, Robinson and Ralph from the last year's freshmen as outstanding candidates.

Manager Charles C. Hersey, of Canton, New York, has announced a schedule of 13 games:

Jan. 10, Trinity at Hartford; 11, Conn. Aggies at Storrs; 18, Springfield; 25, Brown at Providence; Feb. 8, Northeastern at Boston; 15, Worcester Tech; 19, Wesleyan at Middletown; 19, Clark; 21, Norwich; 22, Boston College at Tufts; 26, Boston University. March 1, Mass. Aggies; 5, Trinity; 8, New Hampshire at Durham.

SINGER AND FULLER WIN

New York, Nov. 30—Al Singer, Bronx lightweight scored a technical knockout over Pete Nebo, Seminole Indian from Key West Fla in the fourth round of the 10-round feature bout at Madison Sq Garden

Never before knocked out Nebo was a little more than a setup before the popular Jewish boy

Singer rallied left hooks off a head that never stopped coming forward, slashed home solid rights when the opportunity offered

Singer seemed in no hurry to close with a finishing rally until Nebo cut about the lips and be coming more desperate with every charge, winged over a pair of solid clouts to the head in the fourth round. Singer whipped his own right back to the Indian's chin in a straight line and Nebo sagged at the knees

Two thudding left hooks scrambled Nebo's muddled senses completely and he stumbled backward into a neutral corner while Singer followed him, pouring leather into the Indian's features

Helpless, his arms falling to his sides, eyes closed, Nebo was so nedged in the corner that he seemed unable to fall Referee Danny Ridge stepped in and, stopped the exhibition after 2 minutes and 22 seconds of the round

There were no knockdowns in the earlier rounds, although Nebo was staggered by Singer's husky clouting.

In a 10-round semifinal, held after the main event, Jammy Fuller, Boston junior lightweight, made his Garden debut by winning the decision from Johnny Farr, Cleveland gladiator, in a rough but featureless battle. There were no knockdowns and Fuller's margin due to cleaner hitting, was slight

HOLM LEADER ON DIXIE GRID

Tuscaloosa, Ala. (AP)—Tony Holm, the buffering ram from Alabam, has been the most tamperous man on the Dixie football frontier this fall

He has done more damage than any of the southern backfield menaces, although he has not had the brilliant backfield support that has carried Gene McEver of Tenn ssee and Billie Banker of Tulane, the touchdown terrors, to the regions

With the Crimson Tides championship aspirations wrecked by backfield injuries, Holm has been the pilot light for a team of giants ground under the heels of Tennessee and Vanderbilt and Georgia back and squelch Kentucky and Georgia Tech

And it was Holm, swathed in bandages and nursing a broken rib, who did the squelching.

Holm came into his own against Kentucky, only a week after Van Gerbig had broken a rib for him. He pounded the Wildcat, ran it dizzy and sent it balk home reeling under the weight of a 27 to 27 defeat. He grabbed the opening kickoff, ran it back 88 to the 15-yard line, and kept up his wild mauling stuff for the rest of the afternoon, scoring three of the four Tide touchdowns. He smashed the line, slithered off the tackles, ran the ends, did the punting and plenty of the tackling

And he repeated the next week against Georgia Tech, still wearing the bandages. He trampled all over the Tornado, scoring both of the touchdowns, one after a dash from midfield.

A terrific driver, Holm's specialty is hitting the line yet he runs the ends like a halfback. And he has done as well in the scoring department that only Mel Gardner and Banker have more points to their credit in the South

Dixie fans are wondering what would have happened if Billy Hicks, "Flash" Suther and "Mon" Campbell, three of the Bama backfield aces, had not been forced by injuries to the sidelines most of the season watching Tony rampage.

BILLIARD PLAY ON AT DETROIT

Chicago—The world's championship pocket billiard tournament will be played in the Recreation Building at Detroit, it was announced officially, following a meeting of the National Billiard Association of America

C. A. Storer, director of players, also announced that the tournament would open on December 9 and end on the night of December 15.

Eight players will compete and the schedule calls for 28 games.

Prize money totaling $15,000 puts the gate receipts will be divided among the contestants. First place will be worth $7200, exclusive of the receipts.

The players eligible to compete are Frank Taberski, defending champion; Ralph Greenleaf, Erwin Rudolph, Pasquale Natalis, Joseph J. McCann, winner of Southern sectional title; Spencer Livsey, winner of Western sectional title; Marcel Camp, winner of Northern sectional title, and Onofrio Laure, winner of Eastern sectional title

Muskogee Home Town of Several Grid Stars

Muskogee, Okla. (AP)—Muskogee has sent more than its quota of football stars to universities throughout the country.

On the Pacific coast, Bill Moffat, Stanford halfback, has been leading the conference in scoring. At Wisconsin, John Parks is captaining the Badgers. Adna Cole, another former Muskogee player, is playing end and tackle for Dartmouth.

Sam Richards plays second string tackle for Notre Dame. Leslie Wald, a fifth Muskogee-trained player, stars at fullback for Washington University in St. Louis.

Match Seekers Feel Fist of Ex-Champion

Pittsburgh (AP)—A bunch of the boys were whooping it up in a downtown hotel the other night, celebrating a football victory.

Somebody needed a match and Jack Dempsey went out to get it. They surveyed the long hall of the hotel. The hour was late. There was no sound, except in the room from which the two had come.

"Let's try this one," one of the pair gleefully suggested. They banged on the door. Aroused from his sleep the male occupant showed his displeasure.

There was an argument Sudden by a fist shot out and one o fthe intruders reeled.

Lucky you didn't get anything worse," he remarked. "Of all the rooms in the hotel, you had to pick the one occupied by Kenny Leonard."

Hawkeye Speed Boy Hard on Contenders

Iowa City, Ia. (AP)—Oran Page, the spindle-shanked Iowa halfback, has been the sin to prick the Big Ten championship bubbles

Minnesota last year and this watched its title aspirations steal out of the park on the flying heels of the Dubuque boy. In 1928 Minnesota had six points and Iowa nothinf until Page fallloped 85 yards for a touchdown and a mate made it seven.

This year the bone-crushing Minnesotans stopped Iowa, 7-3 as the game waned. Iowa smashed its way down the field and Page carried the ball over

1 of his prowess but that of the great number of middleweights who were conspicuous in the days of his fighting prime

It was a time when McGoorty was at or around his peak that the division housed men who have become ring immortals. Fighting in that class attracted as much attention as heavyweight battling—oftentimes more and these fellows were as evenly matched that whenever they stepped into action the crowd knew it was due to get a run for its money.

Stanley Ketchel Billy Papke, Frank Klaus, Jack Dillon, Buck Crouse, Les Darcy of Australia, Hugo Kelly, Leo Houck, Jimmy Clabby, Harry Lewis and Mike Gibbons, those were some of the middleweights of Eddie McGoorty's era.

1 STCHEL and Papke were world champions. Darcy might have been, too, had it not been for his untimely death. Dillon was a marvel.

Any of that group could have gained a title at one time in ring dom's history. McGoorty fought almost all of them and continued through the years as a topnotcher.

Born in 1888 McGoorty was only 40 at his death. He started boxing as an amateur when he was 15, and in 1906, at 18, he won the 130-pound amateur championship of Wisconsin.

This success determined him to embark in a ring career, and at 16 he fought his first professional fight

McGoorty started as a slugger. He remained in the ring for 18 years and through all the other years. But Eddie decided to become a boxer and win on points with a jabbing attack, rather than go in for knockouts

IT was a rather wise thing to do in that era. There were main b, no decision days. A fighter lost little prestige through defeat on a newspaper decision and gained but little in victory. For there always could be chanted the story by the loser that the newspaper man's eyesight was bad

On the other hand, if a fellow went out to stay it, he was just as likely to get knocked out as he was to gain a knockout. And to be "bumped off" in that era was regarded as far more disgraceful than it be in these days.

McGoorty fought with remarkable success throughout the U. S., A., went to Australia, made a fine showing there, came back to the States and continued to fight until he left off. Ever a clean and honorable fellow, he was a credit to the ring

3 MALDEN STARS ON ALUMNI 11

MALDEN high football fans get another chance to see the favorites of the championship 1929 team in action this afternoon when the Malden and Medford high alumni teams meet at the Medford High field, at Fulton st

Sammy Fishman and Johnny O'Brien, Malden halfbacks, and George Fenton and Bob Lapidus, linemen, are in the starting lineup of the Malden squad

The presence of these boys on the Malden team should increase the interest of the fans in this clash Fishman is one of the shiftiest running backs of the season, and O'Brien is capable in every department of the game

Lapidus, a guard, played fine football this year. His work in the game with Medford last month brought to the Blue and Gold lineman Fenton, tackle, is strong enough to do good work on a college line.

Other boys who played for the Malden high eleven this year and who are to get into the game today are Lionel Markon and Bob Melton, linemen

These alumni teams of Medford and Malden are not pickup eleven which can play only ragged football The members of the team come from more than a dozen big colleges and all the men who play today have been on the gridiron this fall either in the semipro college and prep school ranks

Dick Ardini of Fordham, Forrest Beach of Dartmouth and George Chalmers of N. Y. U. play on the Medford line today. Dick Phelps, former Holy Cross center, is the great man of Medford

Bud Searcy, Nute Wilder and Irving Plummer are ex-Medford high school boys who are in the Blue and White backfield

John Wellergreen is center of the Malden line. Eddie Heenan and Marshall Burpee are other Malden linemen. Tony Gianfaglia, one of the stars of the Patriots this year, is at right tackle for Malden.

A fierce battle is now complete on centers of the teams This title race should be a real football battle, for the members of both Malden and Medford fans will be on hand to cheer their favorites.

Thornton Jenkins, headmaster of Malden high had, on Friday, what is termed a "pep" conference with Headmaster Kadesch of Medford high school. The rough house of the players in the Malden Medford football game were discussed, and it was deemed time that this be concluded properly. any further talk regarding the unpleasant facts of the game of the players would be useless

Certainly, the splendid spirit of the crowd at the Malden-Medford game should be noted.. Although made up almost entirely of partisan fans, at no time did the throng, which bordered the playing field, attempt to rush on the field or cause any disturbance

The next control of that crowd was commendable In some cases, in the past, a much les serious penalty than the ejecting of boys from the bg game of the day has marked the start of very serious disturbances. Malden and Medford fans, however, let the boys conduct the game The friendship between the people of both cities, shown at the game was the cause for the dropping of the matter by the principals of each school

While Malden has no. decided definite that there will be no post-season game for the 1929 team, any extra contest for the championship Blue and Gold eleven is extremely unlikely in fact that several of the boys are playing with an alumni team and that they seem to consider that they are through with football at Malden, also indicates that the Blue and Gold team will rest on its laurels for the year

CALLAHAN DEFEATS ZERAMBY

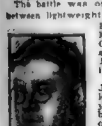
By JACK CONWAY

ANDY CALLAHAN, Lawrence Thunderbolt, is today the New England light weight champion as a result of his victory over Jake Zeramby of Lynn in a slashing 10-round battle at the Boston Garden.

Callahan's heavier punch and hulking-like aggressiveness enabled him to win the decision in a driving finish.

The battle was one of the best between lightweights witnessed in Boston, since Matty Baldwin, Gilbert Gallant and Eddie Murphy were in their prime.

Andy and Jake are only kids in point of years, each being 19 years of age. But that's a pity blessed with ultra bodies and fighting hearts.



Jack Conway

For ten rounds they gave everything they had in the fistic line. They punched and boxed and were trading blows in the center of the ring at the final bell.

The bout acted as a tonic on the boxing game in Boston. It made the fans forget about some of the dreary contests between big fellows which have been staged here during the indoor season.

Callahan won six rounds, Zeramby four, Andy was out front in the first, third, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth sessions. Jake blazed the trail in the second, fourth, fifth and sixth chapters.

THE stirring battle re-established Callahan and Zeramby in Boston. The youngsters proved they can fight and that with experience they will not have to ask for odds from any of the headliners.

It was a gala night for Lawrence as Arthur Flynn came through with a win over Babe McCorgery of Canada in the feature bout.

Flynn fought a smart battle. He kept his left hand popping into McCorgery's face, and in this way offset the Canadian's powerful right hand thump.

BOBBY MAYS of New Haven won the decision over Billy Murphy of Lowell in a 10-round skirmish. The mulling was close and the verdict could have gone either way.

It was Murphy's first start since last January, and he was off his fighting form of distance. Now that he has broken the fistic ice again, Murphy should soon hit his stride.

AL LINZI of Italy disposed of Al Crisp of Winthrop in four heats. Stanley Winnecour of Revere, Monday night's other bout, in four frames, while Joey Mack of Manchester earned two many guns for Johnny Delano of East Boston in four frames.

National Title Meet to Open Harvard Pool

HARVARD will witness its first intercollegiate swimming championships when the National Collegiate Association holds its annual event in the new Harvard swimming pool on March 28 and 29, of next year.

Announcement of plans for the coming meet were announced by William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard.

Bingham invited the National Collegiate Association, through Frederick H. Leuring, director of athletics at the University of Minnesota to hold the championships in the Cantabs' new million dollar tank. The invitation was accepted.

The meet will dedicate the Harvard pool, which is located in the new indoor athletic building at Cambridge. While the entire building will not be finished until June, the pool and accommodations for 1500 people will be ready in time for the meet.

Harvard, itself, is not expected to be represented in the champion ships, as mermen from all over the country gather to settle acquatic honors.

It is rumored, however, that Harvard will have an informal team competing in matches next year.

HARVARD FIVE IS PICKED

Harvard's basketball season began in earnest today as Coach Ed Wachter virtually named the Crimson quintet which would open with Boston University on December 18.

The five, selected by Wachter, are all lettermen from last year's team. They are Captain Hewitt Wenner, Sam Burns, T. Grayson Upton, 2nd Rex and Paul "Pooch" Mahady.

From a small army of embryo hoopsters, Wachter has cut the squad to 21 candidates, and this number is expected to be further diminished before Harvard and B. U. open in Hemenway gym nasium next month.

The Captain coach expects to develop one of the strongest fives that Harvard has known this winter. There is every indication that if all goes as well as expected, this season's team will be undefeated.

Boston, who will unquestionably be Wachter's choice at center for Harvard, is playing his second season on the varsity. He stands at most six and a half feet off the floor and his speed and ruginess has given him a great advantage over his opponents.

This season will be the third consecutive year that Mahady, Rex and Sam Burns have worked together. All three were former freshmen teammates and make a smart combination on the floor.

Three very likely relief forwards are seen by Wachter in Partiseh, Backevilla and Holland. All three were members of the 1932 five, and are expected to see plenty of action on the court this winter.

Of the 85 freshmen candidates who reported to Wachter a few days ago, 28 have been retained.

CLASSY BOUTS AT ST. JOE'S

St. Joseph's T. A. S. will play host to a capacity crowd in Mechanics Building tonight, when it will present an amateur tourney, open to all comers in every class from flyweight to light-heavyweight.

The welsh shows have been drawing average crowds of 2500, but tonight, with the best show of the season scheduled, it is expected that close to 3000 fight fans will attend.

At the same popular prices of 50 cents and $1, it is expected that between 20 and 25 bouts will be held.

Conn. Golfer Leads in Berkeley Open

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 30 (AP)—A field of 64 contestants faced the last 36 holes of play in the $5000 Berkeley open golf championship today.

Billy Burke of Westport, Ct., held a precarious one stroke lead over the remainder of the field. He turned in a brilliant 65, one under par, yesterday, which, coupled with his 71 for the first round, gave him a total of 140.

One stroke behind Burke came Johnny Perelli, professional from the Feather River Inn, California and Abe Espinosa, Chicago, each had for second place with cards of 141.

SEES CALAMITY IF COURTHOUSE NOT ENLARGED

"It will be a calamity if this much-needed project fails because of the refusal of the City Council to accept the act," said Arthur Sullivan, register of probate for Suffolk County, in commenting on the action of the Boston City Council in tabling the act providing for a new courthouse in Pemberton sq. or extension of the present one.

"If the council fails to accept this act it will be necessary to start all over again, in which event it may take 10 or more years to secure favorable action again," continued Register Sullivan.

"From my experience in public life, I understand how hard it is to secure passage of legislation such as this.

When one considers the divergent interests to be dealt with, the various county officials, the Mayor of Boston, the City Council, the County Commissioners, the Governor, the House and the Senate, it is easy to realise the difficulties encountered in passing a bill satisfactory to all."

"I trust the City Council will bring about this necessary improvement instead of losing the opportunity of doing a real public service of great magnitude."

A vote in favor of enlarged facilities for the courts and associated departments who all present pertform their duties in the Suffolk County Courthouse on Pemberton Hill was recorded by the Board of Directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

MOTION BY HARRIMAN

Motion that the question come up for consideration was made by Henry L. Harriman, president of the Chamber. The vote that followed was unanimous and made without discussion.

Sullivan said the present court house is entirely inadequate. He says it is antiquated, congested and inconvenient, lacks space for the proper conduct of business required by law to be carried on there, he continued.

"In the Registry of Probate we have insufficient room for the storage of files and record books which accumulate at a rapid rate and the preservation of which are so vital to heirs, litigants and real estate title holders.

"Space requirements years ago was available to the public doing business in my office, has gradually been taken from it because of the natural growth of business and the increased jurisdiction of the Probate Court and assigned to the clerical force, causing the public much inconvenience.

"This condition is so acute that I was obliged to go to the Legislature and secure the enactment of a bill that would relieve me of the legal custody of the insolvency files relating to cases dealt with by the Probate Court and make the Secretary of the Commonwealth their custodian in order to make room in our vaults for current probate and other records.

"I now have files on three levels, the main floor, the mezzanine, and the basement, and have to search them on one floor. For public convenience and easy handling

"Ample floor space for record books, will be filled in less than one year.

CHILDREN IN CORRIDORS

"There are no consultation rooms, and lawyers are obliged to consult and advise their clients in the corridors. When women faint in court, they can only be dragged into the corridors because there is no rest rooms in which they might be revived.

"When parents find it necessary to bring their young children to court in the winter time they too can only be housed in the cold corridors. While there are frequent times simultaneously when each of the probate court there are but two court rooms assigned to its use.

"These deplorable conditions exist now, and the registry of probate, but are common to other departments in the court house and will grow worse because of the lack of space in which to make improvements.

"Two year since assuming the office as Register of Probate in 1925, I have, with the Sheriff, the Register of Deeds, Judges and other officials appeared before legislative committees and advocated the passage of bills that would authorize the construction of a new building, but was unsuccessful in getting after all these years of diligent effort until the session of 1929 was the creation of one commission after another with their authority limited to a study of the situation.

"The last Legislature made favorable action by the passage of an act under which a commission with authority to act and be incorporated, it will be a calamity if this much needed project fails because of the refusal of the City Council to accept the act.

Grand Rapids Ring Stars to Box Here

Four entries were received from Grand Rapids for the four interclity amateur boxing tournament of the season, which will be held at the Boston Arena, Monday night, December 9. The other cities participating Boston, New York, Grand Rapids, Montreal and Toronto will compete in the event, and bouts will be held in eight championship classes.

George Warren will compete in the flyweight class and he is the only member of the Grand Rapids team which is appearing here for the first time.

Virginia Books Kentucky

Charlottesville, Va. (AP)—After a lapse of 27 years, Virginia and Kentucky will resume football competition in 1930.

Katsonoras to Meet Poddubny

George Katsonoras, Greek champion, and John Poddubny, the Russian heavyweight grappler, have been signed to headline the opening card of Leslie Stevens' Hub's latest wrestling promoter, at the Boston Arena the night of December 11. It has been announced Katsonoras has a lot of friends in Boston. After electrifying fans with his mat tricks, he left this only four years ago for the West Coast, where he played in the movies. He launched a ring career on the Western and Southern parts of the country six months ago, and reports have it he will be a really improved man-maula, when he comes here again. Poddubny, rated by many critics as the greatest heavyweight turned out by the wrestling mold in Russia since the time George Hackenschmidt invaded American rings years ago. He has sent word he feels certain he will toss Katsonoras to earth in jig time. The bout will be to a finish with two out of three falls deciding the winner and loser.

Approximately $8,000,000 in Christmas Club checks were placed in the mail this afternoon by Boston banks, representing an increase of about a million dollars over last year.

The average amount of Christmas cheer per check was slightly over $50. Most of the checks were made out to women.

The entire state will receive about $32,000,000 in these checks, a record which may lead the nation. Several times in past years Massachusetts has stood first in these totals. The national total will be in excess of $400,000,000.

TRY TO BRIBE PROSECUTOR

Providence, Nov. 30 - Following an alleged attempt to bribe Asst. Atty.-Gen. Louis V. Jackvony Edward Fien, 30, of Waterbury, Ct., in local court today was sentenced to 11 months for robbing telephone pay stations.

Sentence was imposed by Judge Frederick Frost after Asst. Atty.-Gen. Jackvony announced an attempt was made to bribe him on the way from his office.

Jackvony declared the bribe was offered in behalf of Fien, and said it characterized the kind of gang with which his defendant was associated.

An official of the telephone company testified that some 500 telephones of telephone pay stations throughout New England could be laid to the gang.

One of its members, William Brown, also of Connecticut, arrested with Fien in Watch Hill, Westerly, last August, is serving 11 months for the same offense in New Brunswick.

In describing the attempted bribery, Jackvony said he pushed the man away, but said he should have accepted the money and had the briber arrested.

Floods Destroy Flier's Landmarks

London, Nov. 30 (AP) An airmail pilot flying from Cologne to London found once familiar landmarks of southeast England so obliterated by flood that he lost his bearings and eventually had to steer by his compass.

The incident was indicative of the present state of a large part of southern and western middle England after abnormally heavy rainfall. Forty thousand acres are overflowed its banks; the Severn in some places is 11 feet above summer level. Many villages are isolated with roads impassable, hundreds of occupants of houses have been driven to residence in upper stories.

SIGN AND SAVE TAXES

Income Tax Editor, Boston Evening American:

You may list my name on a petition to the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, and Congress, to secure adequate reduction in taxes on earned incomes. I believe that the proposed cuts as announced by Secretary Mellon do not represent a sufficiently large proportion of relief to the salaried class. Incomes from labor and creative faculties are subject to limitations and fluctuations, while income from property is a permanent and stable income.

OFFICER NABS 2 YOUNG BURGLARS

Springfield, Nov. 30—Facing a loaded pistol, Sergt. John J. Maher today arrested two youthful burglars in Indian Orchard at 12:30 point of his gun, then frustrated an attempted escape and took them into headquarters.

In local court today Jerry Duval, 18 of Montcalm st., and Carl Windland, 18, of Goodwin st., both of Indian Orchard, were held in $100 each for a hearing December 6 on charges of breaking and entering in the night time while armed.

A resident of Pasco st., telephoned that the store of Antonio Malauzi was being robbed. Sergt. Maher hurried on foot to the scene. The rear door was unlocked, and as he opened it Duval struck at him with the butt of his gun. Maher presented his own weapon and ordered Duval to put his hands.

Sergt. Maher ordered him into the store. Windblad, was hidden behind a pile of cases and was in the act of bringing a blackjack down on the sergeant's head when Maher discovered him and covered him with his gun.

He then handcuffed the two youths. On the way to the station they ran but Maher overtook them and tripped one, bringing both to the ground.

BELGIANS AND FRENCH QUIT

Brussels, BelgiumNov. 30—The Belgian army today was carrying out historic maneuvers. The last of the occupational forces which have been in the Rheland for 11 years will have doped by nightfall.

Evacuation was proceeding throughout the zone, other towns being Cobletz and Remagen. Chapelle, Stolberg, Erkenz, Julliers, Monschau and Schlan

The French flotsam hauled down from the forts of Ehrenbreitstein Coblenz, while last remaining French troo there began evacuation.

The last battalion the Belgian Fourth Engineers intrened at Aachen preceded a band, marched out past GePonleur and staff and the Allied ranks.

Hailed by both Igians and Germans as a hapi event, the evacuation practically ended today," said Gen. Pouleur hen interviewed by Belgian nepaper men, but from the hirdil viewpoint the occupation still stinues.

The Belgian papenhen quoted the general as warni against the possibility of incide after the departure of the Belgi troops.

Two sorts of incidis are liable to provoke incists, namely the Communists an Separatists. The latter, coming in our own redeemed districts ofEupen and Malmedy, have announced their intention of denouncing th Aachen nonsense and, as forie first time in 10 years, the bi and beer houses will be allowed to remain open all night, incides might well occur.

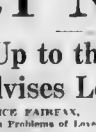
TRY NOT TO BE SILLY WITH YOUNG MEN, GIRLS

Live Up to the Word, 'Pal,' Advises Love Expert

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX,
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"HE calls me his pal," writes Tennie, in the letter I am printing today. And, that Tennie is a very nice name to be called, I'm the boy you like.

A girl and young man may be pals and yet not be sweethearts, a union less dream of becoming engaged to each other. Being pals is in itself well worth while, for it is a not unpleasant friendship one of the first gifts of life.



Beatrice Fairfax

But if a girl and young man plan to be married and hope to keep the fires of affection burning brightly at the home hearth, pals they must continue to be, first and last, under standing comrades. A husband and wife, must in addition, be pals or the marriage cannot be happy.

So, whether you fall in love, or just like and respect the fine, young man who is attentive to you, be glad that he thinks of you as a pal and do not jump at once to the conclusion that he is in love with you. When Tennie became mildly sentimental on short acquaintance, her new pal called her "sort of silly." Try not to be silly, girls. True love is the most wonderful thing in the world, but cheap sentimentality is just "silly."

Here is Tennie's letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I have been reading your column a long time and I hope you will help me. I am 16 years old, five feet three inches tall, with blue-green eyes and brown hair. I'm not exactly what you call attractive—but passable.

"The end of last summer a young man two years my senior happened to be visiting some relatives of his next door. You see, my parents keep a grocery store.

"He came into the store one evening when I was in charge and bought some things. I waited on him, then he went out.

"I usually took the person I went on straight home with me, but I was waiting on him without thinking. There's one other young man, three years my senior, who claims he loves me, starts talking about matrimony and so forth. I don't pet, smoke or drink and I don't go in parties except when given by a club or society.

"This young man I was telling you about was sitting outside on the porch of the store. The children of the neighborhood began acting silly, like children do, remarking his waiting to meet me. I told them to keep quiet and walked into the store.

"But my little brother happened to get acquainted with him—he only visited here two days. Sunday evening he was talking with my brother and happened to notice my friends come over. I had some girls and boys for the evening.

"He asked my brother (he thought I would answer if he spoke to me. My brother told him not to ask me.

"He said he wanted to get acquainted but was leaving the next day, and was afraid he wouldn't have a chance. He wondered if I would allow him. My little brother asked me. I hesitated at first, but said yes.

"Later, I had reason to go to the drug store. I saw him sitting on the porch when I came out. I was sure my brother didn't tell me the truth, so I asked him and he said it was true. I gave him my consent. Did I do right?

"Well he left and I received four letters from him, the first one saying he loved me and so forth. I wrote him a rather silly letter as to his love for me and so forth just to see his reaction. He told me in his next letter to take him seriously, and even said I was sort of silly.

"In the rest of the letter he told me of his friends and doings. He tells me to write him long letters—as long as this one to you. He calls me his pal. Shall I keep corresponding with him? Shall I believe what he writes? I'm in an awkward position, having two young men say they love me. I thank you kindly and will be awaiting your reply.

"TENNIE."

Yes, Tennie, correspond with your new friend if you enjoy the correspondence. But don't write silly, love-sick letters. Live up to that fine name he has called you—pal.

While your acquaintance began informally your neighbors and friends can vouch for the young man's character, his ambitions, as a suitable friend for you.

almost indefinite wait a man said:

"Yes—they took off all right between 3:30 and 4. No—they've not returned. Oh, nothing happened. We'd hear."

At midnight she was still waiting. At midnight Dickie crept in and sat in the big chair opposite. And Laura made no protest. Their terrible vigil began.

* * *

"He was playing there behind that tree. We could hear him."

"How long from the time you last spoke to him until you called and he didn't answer?"

"Five minutes or it might have been ten."

"Ten minutes he was alone ten minutes!" Barbara Bryce flung from the weeping Sophie and went for the hundredth time to that tree in the square. She beat her fists against it as though it had swallowed her son.

Her eyes moved over the hurrying figures who were searching in the bushes, who were beating along the grass. The whole park was filled with searchers. The moonlight fell on their crouched forms—gave them a sinister aspect.

Back and forth between that park and the home of her father-in-law she went. They no longer tried to restrain her. They let her listen over and over to the woman who had seen a man in a brown suit leading a little boy to an automobile.

"Yes, it was a gray sedan—a small gray sedan. She was absolutely sure of that. And they drove westward toward the ocean."

At 9 o'clock that night William Bryce sat with his lawyer. He said hoarsely, his face blanched:

"Just what was the threat that he made—repeat it."

The lawyer answered:

"These are the exact words he used—'If you're protecting Bryce, tell him he'll think twice before he shoots his second round at ME. Because I fire back. And with dumdums!'"

"Is it possible he can have done this?"

"I've been two and a half hours trying to check up on him. He hasn't been to his home. He left the plant around two, it is said. And his plane took off from the field about 5:45. It has not returned."

And at midnight it had not returned.

Nor at 1 o'clock. And no one had seen Guy Elliot. Little Billy Bryce had vanished. Some one in a brown suit had come to that park and led the little boy away.

Tuesday morning the newspapers were hot with the story of the kidnaping of millionaire Bryce's grandson and the simultaneous disappearance of Guy Elliott and Patricia Dawn.

Tuesday at noon, a gray sedan was found abandoned on the Skyline boulevard. On a mat on the floor of the car a detective found half a dozen sickly gold hairs—the hairs of little Billy Bryce.

The gray sedan was Guy's car.

His plan had not returned to Mills Field. Nor had anything been seen of him and the beautiful young girl with whom he was in love.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ELEANOR THOMPSON is a very unhappy woman. You might say, she's inveterately unhappy.

Everyone says, "What a shame a fine woman like Eleanor should have had such a terrible time. Ever since she was a girl . . . You know how her father failed, just as she was entering college, and she had to take any job she could get. Then her brother Jim was drowned . . . she'd Jim had just idolized each other. Then she had that long sickness, after she married Steve . . . then the baby died . . . and she almost went insane from grief . . . and to cap it all, Steve ran away with that Turner woman. What an awful life she's had, poor thing! Oh, of course, she has a fine position now and a lovely home . . . but it has come too late. You can't expect her to be happy after going through all that."

Elsie Robinson

That's what people say about Eleanor, and Eleanor agrees with them. She often speaks about it, and wonders, wistfully, if she'll ever be really happy before she dies.

PROBABLY SHE WON'T . . . BUT THAT ISN'T BECAUSE FATE HAS IT IN FOR ELEANOR . . . IT'S BECAUSE ELEANOR, HERSELF, IS NOT WILLING TO BE HAPPY.

How mad Eleanor would be if you told her that! But it's true.

Eleanor had had a run of bad luck . . . such a run of bad luck that her mind has actually gotten "set" against good luck. For years she was in a blind panic of grief and fear. You've seen animals in that condition . . . frightened animals, backed into a corner. Life backed Eleanor into a corner. AFTER A WHILE SHE GREW USED TO THAT CORNER . . . ACTUALLY PREFERRED IT. Depression was a refuge at first . . . gradually it became a DISTINCTION.

It set her apart and made her important to be unhappy all the time. Unhappiness became a habit, a stubborn habit . . . a lazy, conceited habit.

Eleanor would indignantly deny all all this. She would protest that she really wants to be happy . . . but she fools herself, as most of us do. Eleanor CAN be happy if she wants to be. The only thing that's holding her is . . . Eleanor. Of course she has had hard luck in the past . . . but so have many other people. That sad past couldn't blast Eleanor's present if she were willing to shake it off. But she won't. She has found it easier and more interesting to be unhappy than happy . . . she has made an INTELLECTUAL CULT OF GRIEF. She is WILLING TO BE HAPPY.

Did you ever stop to think of the exact meaning of the word "willing"? It means much more than "being ready to accept." It means that you WILL to accept . . . that you DELIBERATELY DETERMINE TO ACCEPT.

We can all have happiness if we're WILLING . . . and WILL to have it.

But we must first come out of our corners. We must relinquish those tragedy roles by which we, unconsciously perhaps, acquire importance. WE MUST PUT AWAY THE LAZY, COWARDLY, CONCEITED HABIT OF GRIEF.

Three Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

ALTHOUGH Cornwall is a part of England, it is a different from England as night from day. Not only has it definite physical characteristics of its own its whole atmosphere and environment is distinctive. Indeed, until comparatively recent years the Cornishmen spoke a language quite their own

Cornwall is one of the oldest parts of England and this perhaps accounts for the pride of its inhabitants, a pride which is sometimes misconstrued as aloofness. It was in Cornwall that King Arthur and his knights held their tourneys and performed their deeds of valor and chivalry. It was in what is now Cornwall that the druids were so active with their strange religious rites, monuments to which still stand.

The Cornish country is dull and rugged. The dark open moors match well the angry coast—the most dangerous littoral of Great Britain. Hence, especially the homes of the miners—miners who have worked the tin mines discovered by the Phoenicians in ancient times—are built of granite and slates, giving another dull touch to the picture. Yet there is a fascination about it all.

One of the most historic spots along the Cornish coast is known as St. Michael's Mount. This is a peak rising out of the sea off of Marazion. It is connected with the mainland by a low tide, when a natural causeway, thrown up by the sea, is exposed.

The Mount is crowned with a castle and chapel which are surrounded by a multitude of lore. Years and years ago Edward the Confesaor confirmed the Mount's occupancy by the Benedictine monks. During its occupancy by religious orders it was the priory of Mont St. Michel in Normandy, and as such paid annual tribute to the French monastery.

On the west side of the crag is a hollow which has been known for ages as St. Michael's Chair. According to tradition, St. Keyne, a legendary saint, the daughter of a Welsh saint—equally legendary—came to St. Michael in the fifth century and ordered that when a man and a woman married the feast to sit in St. Michael's Chair should be the master of the house hold.

This is but one of the thousands of legends and myths which surround various spots in Cornwall.

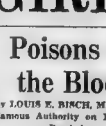
Poisons in the Blood

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M. D., Ph. D.,
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

EVERY now and then one hears of somebody who developed "blood poisoning" from a blister on the foot, from a bang-nail or from some other cause that, it would seem, is harmless in itself and should not produce such a disastrous result.

What happens, of course, was this. The blister, or whatever the trouble, became the seat of infection. Germs of some variety were introduced there and grew there. And what is more, these germs finally entered the blood-stream and the real trouble starts.



Dr. L. E. Bisch

It is astonishing how rapidly, sometimes, such cases of blood-poisoning can develop. In a few days an entire forearm or leg may become involved. Often such a limb must be amputated in order to stop the spread of the infection.

And it is not altogether uncommon for such an infection to overcome the patient no matter what the doctors may be able to do, the final result being death.

Up to the time of Lister, an operation of even the slightest kind was fraught with the greatest danger of blood poisoning.

Nowadays, however, thanks to Lister and his discovery that germs may be killed in a wound with antiseptics, many cases that would otherwise succumb to blood poisoning may be saved if prompt help is received in a surgeon's office.

Wounds that are not "draining well" as the doctors say, must be opened and that pus and germs and poisonous products may escape and not be absorbed into the system.

Furthermore, such wounds may be treated locally with wet antiseptic dressings to promote drainage and to help the body in killing the germs and hindering their poisons from activity.

In surgical operations of this day and age strong antiseptic solutions are never employed.

Lister himself used carbolic acid. But the object of the modern surgeon is to prevent germs from entering a surgical wound and therefore the surgeon washes hands and the skin of the patient are cleansed with antiseptics before he starts to operate.

Instruments and towels, etc., are invariably sterilized before use. Sterilization is accomplished by boiling or exposure to steam under pressure.

Never neglect a wound on your body no matter how slight it may seem. Cleanse it always with some mild antiseptic solution or tincture of green soap and paint it with iodine or mercurochrome.

Never bathe the wound in water and then tie it up. The water as well as the cloth may carry germs into the wound unless both are sterilized.

Pasteur revealed by his experiments that a clean wound does not breed germs, but that germs enter from without, from the atmosphere or from articles coming in contact with the wound.

The Truth

ABOUT AGE

By ELINOR GLYN

GIRLS, have you ever thought of what a misguided word "Age" is when used to suggest years—the number of years a person has spent on earth? When in really "age" should mean declining force, and this demonstrated in withering flesh, sagging muscles, loss of activity, fading color, lessening vitality and a general decay of the body.

Elinor Glyn

If none of these symptoms are present, how absurd to brand anyone as "old!"

We have all seen men and women of 70 who are really used, because all these signs are evident. Again we have all seen people whom we know to be 40 or 50 who seem still to express only youth and vigor.

Therefore, the thought must come—is it really necessary to age? Or could it be possible to retain the freshness of the body until our "number is up"?

It is very difficult to regain one a youth if once you have let it slip from you, but it is comparatively easy to retain it if you take the necessary steps in time.

The first thing to remember is that what you put into the machinery is the real cause of the body's decay or its resilience. If you put in the right things, then there is no reason for it to go wrong, but only, after many years, actually wear out.

No one can remain young who pours in irritants like cocktails, or tires the digestion with unsuitable food. The next thing is very strange and something you may not believe—but I will tell you about it tomorrow.

Nancy Page Quilt Club -:-

By FLORENCE LA GANKE

A DIRECTION LEAFLET that will aid in making the Alphabet Quilt will be sent free to any reader sending a stamped, addressed envelope to Nancy Page, Boston American Co. P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

JOAN was fond of a story in rhyme which Aunt Nancy told her. It started, "An old gray goose walked forth with pride, with goslings seven at her side." The members of the quilt club had heard Nancy tell the story so many times that they were quite sure the G block in the alphabet quilt would be a goose. Sure enough it was and a gray one, too.

The gray was particularly effective with the soft green used to connect the blocks of white on which the figures were appliqued. The letter G was embroidered in fast color green, the same shade as had been used for the preceding letters in the earlier blocks.

The club members followed the usual procedure of cutting the whole square from the paper. Over this they laid the square of white, cut a quarter inch larger on all sides to allow for turning edges under.

By holding the two firmly against the window pane the pattern could be traced onto the cloth and a sharp, hard lead pencil used for this.

Then the square was pasted on a light weight piece of cardboard or tag board. It was dried under the weight. When thoroughly dry the outline of goose was cut. The bill was separated from body.

The material laid on a small piece of fast color yellow gingham. Allowing a quarter inch for turning under on all sides, the piece was cut and edges basted under.

The body was cut from gray gingham, allowing a like allowance of one-quarter inch on all sides was made. The small piece for legs was cut from yellow.

After the edges were turned under, basted and pressed the material was pinned in place on the white block. The bill and legs were appliqued first, using a fine white cotton. A slanting, invisible hemming stitch was used. The body was stitched in place. Deep gray embroidery cotton outlined the wing, using blanket stitch.

The eye, nostril were worked in solid satin stitch in red. The letter G was done in fine outline or chain stitch. The water in the wavy line at the bottom was done in blue embroidery cotton, using a fine running stitch.

One member of the club took her finished block home and showed it to her young daughter. She immediately said, "Mummie, that's the goosey goosey gander, isn't it?"

Another youngster looked all over the block for the golden egg that the goose was supposed to have laid.

But the mothers who were making the alphabet quilt were too intent upon the various blocks they were fashioning to think of golden eggs. Mother Goose rhymes or nursery jingles. They were impatient and hated to wait for the next block. "'H' comes next," said one of them, "what do you suppose Nancy has planned for that letter?" "I can think of hurry, horse, hound, hops and hay," said one well read mother. But Nancy told them it was none of these.

Block 8 will appear on this page in next Wednesday's Boston American.

Don't Scold Child Too Much

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

A GREAT many mothers feel that they must never, never lose an opportunity to bring home object lessons to their children, often ruining the effect of that object lesson in their very stressing of it.

Constance Cameron

I've heard mothers take all the fun, all the education and good influence out of a story by winding up with a solemn "NOW, you SEE. If the little boy hadn't disobeyed his mother, he wouldn't have gotten into all that trouble!" Just as if a child old enough to listen to a tale of disobedience and its resultant dire effects wasn't capable of figuring all that out for himself! AND if he DOES figure it out for himself, it will mean so much more to him.

Downtown a short time ago I heard a man talking to her small boy about a man who was legless and propped up against a building begging for money. A few yards beyond the cripple the mother stopped and delivered what I presume she considered a timely and effective lecture. It seemed from the scraps of conversation that the lad had been careless about running into the street and Mother was trying to impress upon him the dangers connected with such activities. This in itself was all right, but I strongly doubt the wisdom of her method.

"You see," she informed the small boy, "if that man hadn't run out into the road he wouldn't have had his legs cut off."

The boy cast a cool glance of inspection at the man.

"It's all right," he said. "See, will you buy me an ice cream cone?"

I doubt whether it made any impression except one of doubt as to his mother's veracity.

Children are observing. Their world is so much smaller than ours that they notice and ponder over things which we pass lightly by. They will get a sense of values, a sense of what is right and wrong by your example, by good literature, by your fair attitude toward life and people a little quicker than they will by your constant preaching about everything you see.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Fruitful Fig

RECENTLY fig growers in the Southern States, and especially in Texas, began to wonder why figs could not be canned just as any other fruit is preserved, and accordingly experiments were made and the best varieties selected for the canning. A large one with amber skin and pinkish amber pulp, the Magnolia, was chosen.

Martha Lee

As a result, today we have your choice of figs put up in medium syrup, whole, halved or crushed, pickled or preserved. The growers have found that there is a market for the fruit in both glass and in tin containers. Probably the jars help sell the fruit because of the charming appearance, but the careful housewife, after comparing prices, decides on the tinned ones.

The quality is the same, but the price is different. For instance, a No. 1 can containing 12 ounces costs in many localities 25c, while a 13-ounce jar costs 37c! Ten cents extra just for appearance. In a certain store a No. 1 tin costs 23c or 1 9-10c per ounce; a 9-ounce jar costs 20c—4c per ounce, or over twice as much. A No. 2 can, 20 ounces, costs 35c, a 19½-ounce jar costs 55c. Pinned figs can also be bought in No. 2's and No. 10 cans at a saving price.

To give an idea of the widely varying uses to which figs can be put, here are two recipes:

BAKED FIG APPLES

Select tart apples of good flavor and core them. Fill the hole with crushed figs, or whole canned figs which have been run through the meat chopper. Bake as usual, basting with hot sugar syrup. Serve cold with whipped cream. Or, if you wish, you can cover them with a meringue containing nuts, and brown it in the oven.

FIG SALAD

Cut the following amounts of fruits in cubes: 1 orange, 2 peaches, 2 slices of Hawaiian pineapple, 1 banana, 1 can of figs. Quarter the Maraschino cherries from a small bottle and cut 20 marshmallows in pieces. Shred ¼ pound blanched almonds and a very few heads of celery. Mix all well. Mix lightly, adding a few drops of lemon juice, and arrange on lettuce leaves. Serve with boiled dressing.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

IN HONOR OF MISS MARION LITTLE, Mrs. Edward H. Little of Toppans lane, Newburyport, gave a luncheon this noon at the Ritz-Carlton. Sixty of the season's debs were bidden to this affair. Miss Little's dress was of chenille red crepe and gardenias were her choice in flowers. Her mother was attired in black. As has been the case with several of those making their debut in this holiday time, the debutante is a student at Vassar College. She was introduced to Newburyport society this week at a tea.

ONE OF THE SEASON'S most charming debutantes, Miss Barbara West, made her formal bow at a tea-dance today at the Longwood Cricket Club. This daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John West of West pl., was frocked for the occasion in an eggshell silk with a lace top and a long skirt falling in points. Miss Peggy Shaw of New York, a house guest of the Wests, received with mother and daughter in gown and hat of brown lace. The tea tables were in charge of Miss Constance Greco, and those serving were Miss Phoebe Russell, Miss Harriet Fitz, Miss Phyllis Vose, Miss Virginia Rice, Miss Elinor Coues, Miss Virginia Beatey and Miss Annette Hollis, whose marriage to Malcolm Turner Hill is to take place in June. A group of ushers saw to it that dancing was one of the features of the party. They included Edgar Harding, John Swope, Richard Lombard, Robert O'Brien, Samuel Calles, James Baldwin, J. Walter Salmon, Jr., Girard Swope and Edward Ropes.

MRS. JOSEPH A. HALL OF Tappan st., Brookline, gave a presentation tea for her daughter, Miss Carolyn Hall, yesterday afternoon at her home. The debutante, who is a freshman at Vassar, was dressed in eggshell panne velvet and carried talisman roses. Miss Alice Weatherbee of Brookline was head pourer and those assisting with the tea were Miss Margaret Parker, Miss Charlotte Smith, Miss Helena Hyde, Miss Mary Kaiser, Miss Ruth Clapp, Miss Marion Little, Miss Marie Tuffts, Miss Barbara Proctor, Miss Dorothy Newton, Miss Mary Elizabeth Lowe, Miss Dorothy Hall, Miss Phyllis Vose Dorothy Hall, Miss Phyllis Vose and Miss Charlotte Valentine. Mr. Robert Cutler is having a dinner party for Miss Hall this evening, following which Dr. and Mrs. Elliot Cutler, of Cleveland, formerly of Boston, are to be hosts at a theatre party.

THE FIRST PERFORMANCE of Boston's new opera company, which takes place at the Boston Opera House Monday night, promises to draw an audience of unusual brilliance. Including Massachusetts and Greater Boston Churches

PROGRAMS OF CHURCHES FULL UP

"THE BLACK CHRIST"

Dr. William L. Sidger of the Copley Methodist Church will give a drama sermon tomorrow morning in which he will speak especially on the drama, "A Black Christ," by County Cullen, 18s negro poet. This is the first of a series of pre-Christmas sermons on books dealing with some social or racial problem. Among other things he will preach on "Street Scene," "What is wrong with marriage," and "What is right with marriage." After each sermon there will be a discussion period in a class for that purpose. This forum to discuss what the morning preacher has said is unique, and should be well attended.

TRAINING EMOTIONS

Mr. William F. Linehan, dean of Teachers' College, Boston, will give an address next Tuesday evening before a large class of social service students at Boston College high school on James st. He will take for his theme, "Training the Emotions."

FIRST CHURCH

Mr. William E. Zeuch, organist at the First Church of Boston, Berkeley st., will tomorrow give a special concert at 4:30. The public is cordially invited. Frequently the church has been so crowded to hear this renowned organist that all could not get in and were forced to leave. Among other pieces, Dr. Zeuch will play tomorrow is the Fantasia and Fugue by Liszt.

AT FOREST HILLS

The annual solemn triduum in honor of the Immaculate Conception will begin in St. Andrew's church, Forest Hills, on Thursday evening, December 5, and will continue until Sunday evening.

CATHOLIC CHILDREN

A sale will be held in St. Cecilia's Guild Hall, Belvidere st., Boston, in aid of the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, on Monday, Dec. 2. The sale will last all day.

COMMUNITY CHURCH

"Paying the Piper." Much interest has been aroused over the title of a sermon to be preached by Rev. John Haynes Holmes, who will be in the pulpit of Community Hall tomorrow morning. There is a suspicion that he is going to talk on the recent disastrous slump in the stock market, while others conclude he is to once more giving his opinion of heavy armaments and military preparedness. All interested are welcome.

WOMEN'S RETREAT

The annual novena in honor of the Immaculate Conception at Holy Trinity Church, Shawmut ave., Boston, will begin today and end Sunday, December 8, on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

FATHER O'CONOR

Mrs. John A. Reardon, Jr., president of the Guild of the Infant Saviour, announces the next regular meeting, to take place at the League House, Arlington st., Boston, next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. Committee reports will be made on the recent Olde English Faire.

Addresses will be made by the Rev. George P. O'Conor, spiritual director, and the Rev. Thomas A. Reynolds.

FOR AGED WOMEN

The annual Christmas bazaar in aid of St. Joseph's Home for Aged Women will be held at the Home, 321 Center st., Dorchester, on Friday and Saturday, Dec. 6 and 7, between 12 noon and 10:30 p. m. each day.

The proceeds of the bazaar will go toward defraying the general expenses of the Home.

Supper will be served at 6 o'clock on both days.

CHURCH FEDERATION

A quiet hour for social workers will be observed next Tuesday evening in the Crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral, when all who are interested in Boston's benevolent institutions are invited to hear and meet Prof. David A. Vaughan of Boston University School of Theology. The occasion is under the auspices of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches.

UNION CHURCH

The subject of Rev. Herbert A. Jump's sermon in Union Church on Columbus ave. tomorrow morning will be "Loyalty That Feels." The illustrated drama lecture in the evening will be Longfellow's Evangeline." A pageant, "Guardians of the Light," will be a supplementary feature.

CHESTNUT HILL

The novena in honor of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the Church of St. Ignatius, Chestnut Hill, which started on Friday evening, Nov. 29, will end on Dec. 7.

"ON BEING KIND"

Today at Temple Israel, Rabbi Harry Levi will talk to the children of his congregation at 10:30 on being kind. Tomorrow morning his sermon will be on "Religion and Life." This will be broadcast.

RADIO PERIOD

Among the speakers for the Catholic radio hour tomorrow afternoon 3 to 4 o'clock over WNAC is the Rev. Joseph F. McGlinchey, D. D., J. P. P., who will speak on Catholic missions.

IN IRELAND

Much interest has been aroused among all Irish people who learn with satisfaction that Eucharistic congress which met in Chicago two years ago and more recently in Australia, will meet in Dublin, Ireland, in 1932. Pope Pius XI has approved the selection.

TREMONT M. E.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed at the Tremont St. Methodist Episcopal Church tomorrow morning at 10:30. The theme of the pastor, Dr. Charles E. Carroll, will be "Some Special Applications of the Golden Rule." At 7 o'clock there will be a 15-minute organ recital and song service led by the church trumpeter. Theme: "Rock Upon Which Christ Built His Church."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S FELLOWSHIP—10 YEARS

Tomorrow is an important date in the annals of the Young People's Fellowship of the Episcopal Church for it will mark the 10th anniversary of the founding of this society. An interesting anniversary program has been planned and the services in connection with it will be held at the Church of the Messiah, Auburndale, 3 p. m.

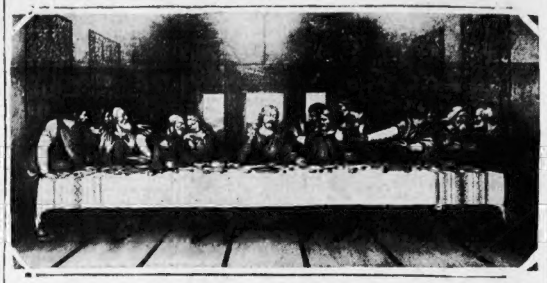
CATHOLIC EDUCATION

An official communication from Cardinal O'Connell calls for all Catholic churches to contribute tomorrow to a fund for higher education. Especially is the work of the Catholic University in Washington, D. C., mentioned as needing increased funds "if it is to spread its beneficent influence over wider fields and to accommodate the growing number of young people who seek Catholic education."

Y. BOYS' CONFERENCE PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Seven hundred boys are expected at the 40th annual conference of the boys' department of the Massachusetts Y. M. C. A. to meet at Pittsfield next Friday, Saturday and Sunday. This gathering also includes the T. P. organization of Rhode Island. Among the speakers will be Dr. Henry Crane, Charles Brandon Booth and David "Ted" Evans of Boston University. Chairman of the committee on boys' work is Mr. William B. Alexander of Melrose.

Hub Artist Copies Great Picture



A beautiful copy of Leonardo DeVinci's Last Supper, the original of which is in Milan, Italy, has been presented to the Methodist church of Newtonville where it has been recently hung. The artist, Mr. H. W. Chaloner of Melrose, has worked three years in reproducing each detail in perfection as far as the delapidated original can be followed. Those who have studied the Chaloner copy have declared they receive much the same impression as from the Milan painting.

The picture is nine feet by sixteen. The Rev. L. W. C. Emig, pastor of the church, feels that this picture will add much to the religious atmosphere of his church, and he invites all interested to come and see it.

Proselyting

The faith that I hold is best of all,
And I cherish it deep in my soul.
The faith that you have is dear to you,
And you think it better than mine.
I'll give you the right to think as you please
Though your errors mount to the sky.
But when you find in the days to come
That I have a marvelous guide
Who compels me to love where others hate
And forgive when the rest condemn;
When you learn that my heart will encompass the world
And my fondest hope is to serve mankind,
Then you will come in a humble mood
And ask that I open the gate for you
Where the fruit of love grows large.

Danger Sign Raised by Jewish Charities

A mass meeting of Boston's Jewish people has been called at Beacon Temple for tomorrow evening to face a very grave situation among the Jewish charitable organizations. Speakers will there declare that there is today a very critical situation, especially in connection with Beth Israel hospital. It is hoped that the meeting will result in keeping the hospital open and other threatened charities from going to pieces. The Jewish Advocate says:

"Some tangible action is not taken in all haste the community will bear the blot of disgrace and shame for failure to respond to the present emergency."

Rev. Greenway Leaves for Brooklyn

The Rev. Cornelius Greenway, who recently resigned from his associate pastorship of the Church of the Redemption, left yesterday for his new parish, All Souls Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. This young clergyman who had made considerable of a place for himself in Boston, although scarcely more than a boy, will now have charge of one of the outstanding churches in the Universalist faith. His theme for his first sermon before the new congregation will be, "The Vision Splendid." He will tell what he sees as a possible future for himself and will take into his confidence, so far as he can, the people who will gather to hear him.

Old People in State May Receive Aid

A Massachusetts commission on old age security has made preparations for a State-wide effort to arouse citizens of this Commonwealth to the need of taking proper care of the old who are without income. A bill has been carefully drawn which will, if passed next session of the Legislature, bring to each needy man or woman $7 a week after he or she has passed the age of 65. This is following the practice in many European countries and in some of the states of the Union.

NEW YORK PAPER COMMENDS THE CALVERT CLUB

In a two-page editorial The Catholic Commonweal, of New York city praises highly the recent Calvert Round Table conference at Harvard between Catholics, Jews and Protestants. In "Benevolence in Boston," the editor points out that Boston is leading in its tolerant attitude, and in its apparent determination to live as a happy family divided in faith but one in a great many common civic and social interests.

The editor writes among other things:

"The statue of Phillips Brooks, which stands in the very heart of Boston, must recall to many passersby the sincerity with which New England has pursued its various spiritual quests. To some it will also be a reminder of Brooks' willingness to reject decisions which the consciences of others had reached.

* * *

"The point was made, under a different heading, by an eminent and eloquent Boston priest, who argued that the basic divergences should be accepted as primal facts. But peace between the churches? That depends largely, it seems to us, upon widespread recognition of the fact that relief on is the cure rather than the cause of many prevalent hatreds. The Boston conference was certainly headed this way, and the spectacle was interesting and promising.

EXPECTS SOME DIFFICULTY

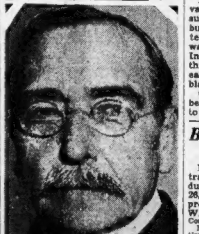
The Federal Council of Churches prophesies a warm debate in the coming council for disarmament, to be held next January in London. In the federal council bulletin the editor writes:

"Honestly believing in the force-philosophy (the Conservatives), put little or no faith in arbitration treaties or in international law and international courts. The Pact of Paris signifies little to them. They hold that the only real security for a nation is the strength of its army and navy. Hence they favor aggressive nationalitic politicies and colossal military preparations and oppose President Hoover's policies of reduction. They rejoice in the developing R. O. T. C. and all the procedures by which the War Department is militarising the outlook of youth in many of our colleges and high schools. All this, they insist, is in the interest of security and justice and of taking our rightful place in the world.

Dr. Watson at Tremont Temple

"Man's Greatest Need" is the sermon topic chosen by Dr. Robert Watson for tomorrow morning at Tremont Temple. He says this came from his experience in visiting Fr. Power's grave while a thick snow was falling. He was so impressed by the tragedy of what he saw that he could hardly stand it and wept freely. Then a boyhood a party from Connecticut with a three-year-old cripple that was laid on the entire covered slab and then was smeared—face, limbs and neck—with mud, the parents praying meanwhile all the while. The need for faith and religion seemed to Dr. Watson man's tremendous necessity. He felt, however, that the tragedy of the Malden Cemetery was greater than the benefits received and he welcomed Cardinal O'Connell's action.

Church Union



Rev. Dr. Frank Knight Sanders of Rockport, Mass., who, last week, was one of the leading clergymen to help in consummating the union of two denominations, the Christian Church and the Congregational Church. The ceremony took place in New York city with many leaders of both branches of the Christian faith present. While the smaller division may lose its name, "Congregationalism" will continue to hold its ancient and modern significances.

Popular Small House at $13,400 Cost

ATTRACTIVE HOME, WELL DESIGNED
By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

HERE is good example of what can be done in the way of combining beauty and utility in a small house. House A-198 has been designed to meet the following requirements which are the popular demands of today.

First the house must be strikingly attractive. It must be of a minimum cubical content with rooms of good size and proportion.

There is an ever-growing demand for additional plumbing facilities. Two master bathrooms are desired on the second floor, a toilet room on the first floor and provision made for a servant's bath on the third floor, aside from the kitchen and laundry.

A two-car garage attached to and heated from the house is very desirable. Ample closets of good size are required throughout the house, including a cedar closet on the third floor.

Entrance halls in a small house are no longer a necessity and the space they require is more serviceable when given over to the living room.

A conveniently arranged kitchen with plenty of cupboards and a grade cellar entrance also are essentials in the ideal plan.

A study of these plans will reveal how these demands are met.

The house has a frontage of 43 feet and six inches and would fit well on a plot having a frontage of 75 feet.

The house contains 26,812 cubic feet and would cost approximately $13,400.

COMPLETE working plans and specifications of the house illustrated above may be obtained for a nominal cost from the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Any technical questions regarding this house will be answered without cost or obligation. Address the National Modern Homes Bureau, Real Estate Department, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Refer to House A-198.

The Fine Points in Homes of Today

By BETTY BONNELL

A LINEN closet may be the housewife's joy, or if it lacks the proper arrangement, it may prove a source of worry and dissatisfaction.

Betty Bonnell

Everything, of course, depends on size and, particularly, arrangement. I stress the latter, because you can have a very roomy closet, and yet, if the proper arrangement for accommodating each article is not plotted out beforehand, it will be most certainly a disordered and bothersome affair.

In designing and arranging the various compartments, I would suggest that you have cupboards built around the three sides, extending from the ceiling downward about one-fourth of the way. In other words, you will have three large compartments, one on each wall, where you can store blankets, quilts and other woolens. Of course, the interiors should be lined with aromatic red cedar to give complete protection. The compartment door panels can be purchased in any dimensions.

Then, it would be wise to build four shelves on the two facing sides and here you can neatly arrange your colored sheets, pillowcases and towels.

I notice that many women are paying particular attention to little details that brighten up the linen closet and introduce a note of color. For instance, you can keep things in a piles of a half dozen or dozen and tie them together with fancy little straps with bei-ribboned snaps or bows. Even lace, net and novelty fastoons can play their part under the fingers of the modern housewife who knows her colors.

As for the shelves themselves, you can do very well by covering them, as well as the bottoms of the drawers with long, scented pads in harmonizing colors.

The wall facing the door will probably prove the best for a series of closet drawers where you can conveniently store your fine linens, special table-cloths and other large pieces.

SEES INDUSTRY GROWTH IN '30

Detroit was chosen as the place of holding the 1930 meeting of Industrial Property Division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards by action of the executive committee of the division at the close of its second annual fall meeting, held in St. Louis.

The year 1930 will see substantial renewal of industrial expansion, industrial property experts predicted at the St. Louis meeting. The past year has seen a decided tendency nationally for industry towards mergers, a tendency now unlike that of the late 70's, George C. Smith, chairman of the division pointed out.

Mr. Smith, who is director of the industrial Club of St. Louis, cited this tendency of industries to abolish competition rather to open branch plants as a feature of the past year which has tended temporarily to lessen industrial extension.

Reduction of two and a half billions in call money for brokers' loans through the recent stock market break should mean a very substantial return of funds for expansion of industry, he pointed out.

BUILDING BOOM WINS SUPPORT

As chief executives of Massachusetts cities were preparing to respond to Gov. Allen's invitation to advise him as to the probable outlins of their, respective appropriations for public improvements during the coming fiscal year, so as to stimulate all as far as possible to follow the spirit of President Hoover's lead in restoration of faith in American prosperity, Mayor McGrath of Quincy was the first to file with the governor his report.

He informed Gov. Allen that Quincy is prepared to keep at work the largest possible number of men in its various departments.

In Everett, Mayor Dolan is prepared to inform Gov. Allen that, if necessary he will start construction of a new municipal hospital.

Mayor E. H. Larkin of Medford will eventually outline his plan for public improvements ehtailing expenditure outside the debt limit of $1,150,000.

Gain of Six Points in Realty Market

Real estate market activity for October shows an increase of six points in the figure which indicates it over the September index number, for real estate activity. October activity is indicated by the figure 85.8, according to the index of real estate market activity compiled monthly by the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

FLIERS DANCE AT QUINCY TONIGHT

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The first of a series of dances by the Dennison Airport Social and Athletic Club will take place tonight at Masonic Temple, Quincy, with about 400 couples attending, according to the master of ceremonies, Josh Crane, head of the Ground School operated at the airport.

Starting shortly after 8 o'clock, and with such dignitaries as Mayor McGrath of Quincy, State Supervisor of Aviation Robert L. O'Brien, Federal Inspector Jack Moran, on deck, the affair promises to be one of the best of its kind.

Primarily, the dance is being held to raise money so that the aforementioned club can buy itself an airplane. Secondarily, the dance will enable people of Quincy and surrounding towns to get acquainted with the boys at Dennison.

Sometime during the evening, 20 airplane ride tickets will be given away to the best dancers, said tickets being redeemable at the Dennison Airport any day thereafter.

A vaudeville show has been arranged to break up the dancing. All the boys who make the music will be dressed in aviation costumes, partly to lend atmosphere to the occasion, and partly to get ready for their own free rides.

Assisting Crane on the committee in charge are Kenneth Estabrook, Herbert Cohen and William Kittmyer, and the quartet hasn't had a good night's sleep since the preparations were started.

Despite the cold weather, the trucks employed by the city to fill the area bordering the north edge of the runway, leading up to the National Guard hangars, are making good progress. Although it isn't official, it is understood that this work will conclude the development of the Boston Airport until the spring.

Even if there isn't anything more done to the size of the airport, from now until the warm winds return, the last, and one of the most important things to be done, is to remove the old Boston Airport corp hangar, which is now sitting right in the middle of the airport.

After an absence of several months, during which he raced across the country from the West Coast to the National Air Races at Cleveland, and toured the country with the National Air Tour, Bob Nagel popped in to Boston Airport with a Bellanca Pacemaker, and said hello to the boys.

Bob holds down the position of second chief test pilot for the Bellanca Aircraft Corp. at Newcastle, Del., and is making the ships perform like nobody's business.

His visit to Boston was a combination of a sales trip, conferring with Guy Vose, officials, local dealers of Bellanca planes, and a short visit home with his folks.

Needless to say, the commercial swag greeted Bob with open arms, and when he visited the National Guard hangar, his old buddies were almost mobbed. Nagle holds a reserve lieutenant's rating with the 101st Observation Squadron, M. N. G., and has long been an active member of that outfit.

A week from today, East Coast Aircraft Corp's hangar, showroom, offices and shop will be dedicated. Stand clear!

Thought for today—

Playing the stock market is an industry that will always be in its infancy.

• • •

Any sap can work the market, but it takes a superman to make it work for him.

• • •

BULL-ETIN
(News Item)

"The program of the $1,000,000,000 banking pool is to stabilize the stock market—and not to buy stock with the objective of selling out later on the bulge."

• • •

According to Mrs. Mamie Colvin, president of the N. Y. W. C. T. U., the police of New York city could clean up the speakeasies in one day if they would.

Which is certainly the nicest thing that's been said about those boys in a long time.

"COLONEL" MAPLE TAKES GRACEFUL NON-STOP FLIGHT!

Peerless Crusader Sets Off Literary Skyrocket!

Today "Colonel" Maple, author of "Palaces of Sin," dashes off one of the most graceful sentences that ever dripped from a righteous pen. We present this jewel for your approval—

NOT many, in fact only a score or two, know how ruthlessly Ruth Willmore of Michigan was enticed by the glitter and glamour of society, up, up, up to the dizzy heights of this seemingly white and innocent marble shaft of society, which rears itself aloft, and by its treacherous light begiles innocent girlhood of our fair land to mount to its heights, there to lose her virtue, honor, good name, in fact all that goes to make "woman" the emblem of innocence.

(Ed. Note—Subscribers are urged to clip and preserve the above sentence. It may become valuable some day.)

Mike Roylan, on the high seas, sends along a copy of the ship's radio news report, which says—

SEVILLE, SPAIN:—King Alfonso is confined to the royal palace by a cold described as serious. According to Premier De Rivera, there is nothing to worry about.

• • •

And Don Herold never calls them "talkies." He refers to them, tenderly, as "illustrated phonograph records."

• • •

"Marriage," trills Moronia, "is a game of tiff and break."

And then she runs for the elevator.

• • •

Milestones on the path to civilization:

BUCHAREST—After his motor car had collided with a taxicab, Prince Nicholas of Rumania got out and kicked the cab driver in the stomach.

• • •

Don't chew the window shade string, dearie. You'll choke!

And when reformers, brave and bold,
Prevent a book from being sold,
The books, of course, thus harshly banned
Are suddenly in great demand.

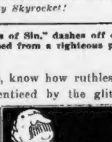
• • •

And this is the time of year when Mary feeds her little lamb into a fur store.

• • •

A skeptic is a person who hears the radio astronomy lecturer estimate that there are 30,000,000,000 visible stars, and then goes out to check up on him.

• • •



This seems to be an entirely sufficient argument for the installation of a royal family in the United States of America.

Adam Scoffiaw's Journal

This night fetched home my new winter pajamas, and when I put them on my dame ask if I will sing "Holly Holly Eyes" and when I ask wherefore she make such a pointless remark she ope wide her whopper eyes and says, "Well you look like you was trying to double for Eddie Leonard."

Independence of All

But Not Isolation From Any Nation, Is Our Goal

PRIME MINISTER MacDONALD recently made a notable utterance at a meeting in the House of Commons at which the guest of honor was Mr. Kellogg, President Coolidge's Secretary of State.

Speaking of the attitude of the leaders in political life with whom he talked during his recent visit to this country, the Prime Minister said:

"They certainly are not going to co-operate with us as allies bound by formal ties. They certainly are not going to commit themselves to European policy and mix themselves in European messes. No President of the United States is going to go back upon their wise traditional policy of keeping out of European messes.

"It is perfectly evident at the same time that wherever and whenever there is a humane flag flying over the world the thought and heart of America will be there. We have never been able to say the United States has failed in support of any great humane cause."

By this timely tribute to that American character in foreign affairs, which it was Washington's dream that his people should develop, the Prime Minister gives convincing proof that his understanding of traditional American policy is quickened by a keen appreciation of the traditional American spirit.

Independence of all nations and not isolation from any nation was the goal of Washington's policy.

Whenever or wherever in the world the American people have had a duty to perform they have not shirked, and they will not shirk.

What they have always done and what they are firmly resolved always to do is to be the keeper of their own conscience and to preserve untrammelled their own freedom of action.

That is why the United States refused membership in the League of Nations. And that is why the United States ought to refuse membership in the League's so-called World Court.

Not because this country is unwilling to co-operate in common causes, but because the American people are determined to keep themselves free "from political connection with every other country."

All this Ramsay MacDonald apparently understands and has had the wisdom and the courage to endorse.

As a matter of fact, Ramsay MacDonald understands the traditions of the United States and the sentiment of its people much better than some of our own public men.

The American people may well hope that by his spontaneous tribute to straight Americanism, Ramsay MacDonald has lighted "a candle of understanding" in the hearts of all English-speaking people "which shall not be put out" either by misunderstanding among themselves or by the misrepresentation of others.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—The psychological effect of light on emotions is emphasized by the hushed eagerness of crowds roaming Broadway after dark. During the day Broadway's expression is one of studied calm. Indeed, a suggestion of boredom.

But after 7 p. m. when the street becomes a huge spurt of electrical fire, the spirit is sky-larking. Everybody seems to relax. It only lacks the showers of confetti and the din of noise makers to make a Mardi Gras celebration.

The sudden prankishness is especially noticeable among the army of visitors who throng there. Ladies who typify the essence of primness back home are likely to turn coy and indulge in a sly and flirtatious wink as they hurry along—amazed and blushing at their own audacity.

Broadway, donning its cap and bells for the evening, is dominated solely by a spirit of fun. Strangers often stop to chat and everybody in amiable transience brushes shoulders. It is the same odd light-heartedness that often inspires tourists in Paris to throw their hats in the air for no reason whatever.

The splash of yellow the world knows as the White Way seems to have a mellowing effect all along the line. I have noticed that traffic officers are inclined to unbend, perhaps wave or smile. Shop keepers and clerks are a little more gracious.

From 7 p. m. until midnight the celebrated street becomes an adventure. Pedestrians do not shinkick and elbow through, they jab through. Even the hard-boiled natives yield to the hoop-la—visit the quick photo parlors, the jewelry auctions and even make excursions in yap wagons.

Frequently after the Broadway nightfall a taxi load of city youngsters cruises down Broadway singing and yelling at pedestrians and otherwise performing in the manner of the born blowing hay riders who—touched by moonlight—jog through Main Street.

The most crowded corner on Broadway after nightfall is at the 44th st. side of the Criterion theater, where seven crossing cops are needed to keep pedestrians moving. And even then they congulate.

A European visitor thinks Ocean Parkway in Brooklyn expresses more of a homelike atmosphere than any other section in the greater city. It is the widest metropolitan avenue and runs from a fringe of a business section to the sea. It is lined with rows of pleasant double houses setting back in the yard and the sidewalks are alive with children.

A variant of the "dumb waiter" gag, which has enlivened many cafes, is the gangster hoax. Several friends take the victim out for dinner. By pre-arrangement a glum, hard faced fellow sits scowling at a nearby table. He sips at a highball and never takes his eyes off the unsuspecting guest.

After a time others appear to notice the constant watch and speak of it. This espionage goes on relentlessly during the meal, while the victim grows a little more fidgety all the while. There is something creepy about a fixed gaze to any innocent person.

Finally, the pseudo gangster comes to the table and growls to the now thoroughly frightened guest: "Where's my brother Ed?" and he adds: "You bumped him off and it is your turn." A fake fight is started and almost invariably the poor victim sneaks out. On the sidewalk a gang, in on the joke, is waiting to give him the max.

They were talking of a young spender known for his riding activities. But it was agreed he was always the gentleman. "He is gallant, all right," observed H. N. Swanson, the collegiate magazine editor. "He always precedes the lady through the wind shield."

After trying for an hour to thaw a fellow who wants to know if there are any reasons why newspapers should print columns I give up.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Man is of soul and body, formed for deeds
Of high resolve; on fancy's boldest wing.
—Shelley.

A man who leaves home to mend himself and others is a philosopher; but he who goes from country to country, guided by the blind impulse of curiosity, is a vagabond.—Goldsmith.

Glory is bought at the cost of happiness; pleasure at the cost of health; power at the cost of independence.—Gaston.

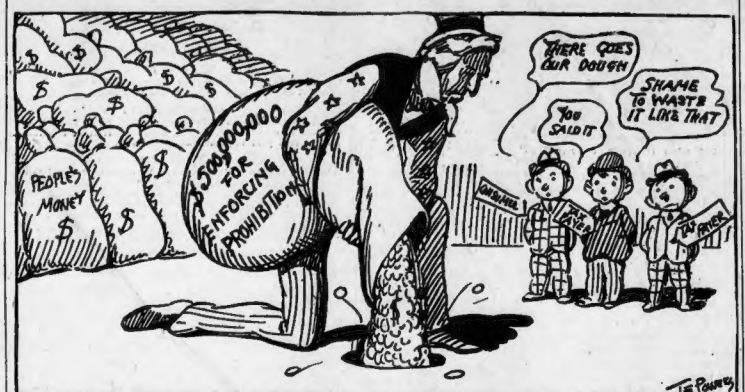
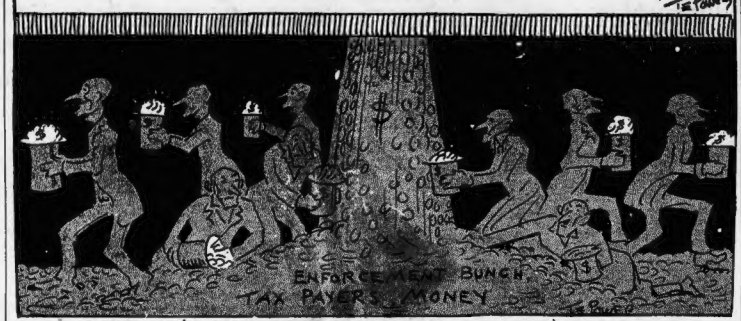
Down a Knothole -:- -:- By T. E. Powers





The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

A WEEPING French jury did charged a young Englishman who had shot his own mother in Paris.

That's jolly good sportsmanship. But he might have given her a gun and made a duel out of it.

There has been an epidemic of this mercy business around the works this year and it's getting monotonous.

When a good Samaritan rides up on a bucking bronche we prefer to walk.

Where there is margin there is hope. There is no man living who has the power to constitute himself the final judgment unless he happens to be on a packed jury.

There have been times when sultans delivered a thousand sacks of wives on the wharfs of the Bosphorus for immediate expert.

If Humpty Dumpty wants to make an omelet out of himself, let him go. But to push him off the wall is not an act of mercy.

We have been sick very often and we like sympathy. But we do not want anybody to feel sorry enough to smack us with a baseball bat.

When we get a sharp pain over the right eye we want medicine. Even if the doctor cannot cure it, we don't want him to tattoo our skull with a blackjack in an effort to make the headache even all around.

Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands call for more collateral. It's getting dangerous to ask a stranger the location of a street because he is liable to shoot you because he doesn't want to see you lost in an inhospitable city.

The man who pulls a trigger ain't working for the life extension bureau. If you happen to have a pain or an ache don't tell the family because the old folks are liable to go into a mercy huddle and you'll be the next guy to carry the football.

Of course, a crying jury is not responsible for its verdicts. And when a jury rains in Paris, it pours. The young Englishman not only forgot to make it a contest by giving his mother a gun, but he didn't even give her a 10-yard start.

If that's mercy, we will go in for the finer things of life, such as rubbing elbows with porcupines.

We have seen many pills in many bottles, but none of them were made of lead. When they start handing in a verdict of mercy with intent to kill the furniture factories might as well start making dining room sets of electric chairs.

H. G. Wells Writes on

"The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

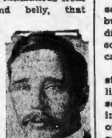
IN the same sort of way it may be that the government receives continual intimations from the chest and belly, that all goes well with the kidneys, or that there is a slight unrest in the stomach that may presage more serious trouble, and so on.

In addition to our accurately analyzable sensations there are vague feelings that at present imperfectly understood, feelings of vigor, appetite, discomfort, restlessness, weariness, oppression, and so on, that lead up to, and are evidently related to, emotional states. It may be that such feelings are to a large extent due to impulses from our viscera.



H. G. Wells

SMELL AND TASTE

Smell and taste are the chemical senses—that is to say, the stimulating agents in each case are not physical influences, such as temperature, pressure of light but chemical substances which act because of their molecular structure.

The mechanism of smell and taste are fundamentally alike. In both cases the essential elements are cells, sensitive to particular substances, and which dispatch impulses to the brain when those substances are present.

In both cases, the stimulating substance has to be dissolved in water before it is effective, thus, although even a weak tincture of quinine has a powerful taste, dry quinine powder, which dissolves slowly and sparingly in saliva, has hardly any taste at all, and similarly odorous substances have to dissolve in the moisture covering the nasal mucous membrane before they evoke any sensation of smell.

The nostrils lead into two triangular cavities which are broken up and made labyrinthine by the scroll-like turbinal bones. The special cells that perceive odorous substances are found at the upper end of these cavities, and on the thin partition that divides the right nasal cavity from the left.

Owing to the complicated structure of the nasal cavities, inspired air does not generally blow over the olfactory membrane; if it did so, it would tend to clog them with its suspended dust, and to dry their moisture. The lower part of the nose is swept by this rhythmic gale while in the upper regions the air is comparatively still.

The organs responsible for the sense of taste are the "taste-buds," egg-shaped clusters of cells distributed over the tongue and soft palate in the process usually called "tasting."

The organs of taste sensu stricto play a part which is as limited as that played by the sense-organs of the skin in "feeling." There are only four kinds of pure taste sensations: Sweet, sour, bitter and salt. Any particular taste-bud is specialized to respond to one only of these four tastes.

HEARING

Sound consists of rhythmical pulsations of the air, and there is no evidence whatever that such pulsations can act directly on living protaplasm.

We find that the stimulus which excites the auditory cells is not a sound-stimulus, but a touch-stimulus, for the ear is an elaborate machine so constructed that whenever sound-pulsations fall upon it sensitive cells are touched.

The organ of hearing consists of three parts—the outer visible ear, the middle ear with its eardrum, and the inner ear.

The inner ear is the true sense-organ, for it is here that the vibrations causes the excitation of sensory-cells and the initiation of nervous impulses.

The outer and middle ears are structures which collect sound vibrations and transmit them to the inner ear, making it possible for that elaborate and fragile device to lie safely embedded in the bone of the skull.

Most mammals are provided with a natural ear-trumpet in the external ear, a hollow cone which can be turned about to face the direction from which sounds are coming, and which therefore makes feeble sounds more distinctly audible.

From this ear-trumpet a short tube leads to the eardrum, the boundary separating the outer and middle ears. In man this amplifying apparatus is poorly developed; the external ear is a mere flap of no acoustic importance and the power of moving it, except in a few gifted individuals, is absent.

The tube leading from this reduced ear-trumpet to the eardrum is provided with hairs and wax-secreting cells that have a filtering and protecting function similar to that of the hairs and mucus-secreting cells of the nose.

To Be Continued Monday.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

"THERE'S a good man 'gone cynic'!" remarked Mrs. Divot, nodding cordially to a well set-up man in tweeds. "Bob Moran vows he's off women and stocks for life!"

"He WOULD be!" rejoined Mrs. Green. "Just like so many other men who have been speculating too wildly in stocks and love, the past few years. When a man speculates, he should be satisfied with small profits; he shouldn't plunge. But, Bob, like all the rest of them, was looking for miracles!

"He is verging on Indian summer, even though he doesn't look it. To a woman anywhere near his own age, he would look like God's perfect Gift—Prince Charming in the flesh. But to the baby-faced little doll, I saw him running around with before the Wall Street panic, he probably looked just like dear old Santa Claus!

"As long as he kept a good car and could play Kris Kringle, with orchids and dinners and good shows, he probably seemed quite dazzling to her. But, when the slump left him flat, and he had to step out of the role of Santa, he didn't fit her young idea of Prince Charming. Any blobby, red-cheeked boy would have suited better.

"A woman around his own age would never have noticed the fine little wrinkles around his spendid eyes; and the little gray patches over his ears would have struck her as charmingly 'distinguished-looking.' But the eyes of youth are keener and more critical.

"There's Alice Darrow, for instance, who'd have made him a gorgeous wife-and-mother. And what a man in the forties needs, when he marries, is a mother to look after him—not a babe to keep him from stepping and worrying.

"When he looks for love, he should find a woman who speaks his own language; who played the same games he should have played, and sang the same songs that he sang; who has the same tastes, the same meal-hours, the same bed-hours and the same outlook on life. The violin age simply can't keep step with the saxophone age!

"Besides, when a man invests in stocks, he should pick something that he knows all about—something solid and staple and steady. And, when he invests in love, he should pick somebody he understands—someone solid and stable and companionable. Wildcat stocks and wild love-affairs always lead to a lot of smashed hopes and dreams and illusions."

"Well," suggested Mrs. Divot cheerfully, "perhaps Bob will turn back to Alice, now, for consolation."

"No," sighed Mrs. Green shaking her head dubiously, "he'll probably go right on through life just being a sad, embittered misogynist and a confirmed woman-hater, thinking that life and fate have cheated him.

"Once a man has had an Indian summer fling—a taste of fair youth or false fortune, he is never anything but a cynic. Speculating in stocks is dangerous enough—but speculating in love and women is positively foolhardy! Especially, after thirty-five!"

Nice Girls—English

And They All Fly.

Copyright, 1929.

THE WOMAN of the future will be the "Flying Girl." These pleasing faces of flying girls from Great Britain make you optimistic about woman's "flying face," as high travel among the clouds will develop it.

MISS ELEANOR SLADE

In Great Britain hundreds of young women, more even than in the United States, are taking to the air, as young as sixteen and seventeen years of age.

And they also fly late in life. The Duchess of Bedford, well past sixty, recently flew from England to India and back again, "just for the pleasure of it."

Miss Eleanor Slade, the young girl at the top, is a secretary of air work and flies her own plane.

Miss Sicele O'Brien is one of the best known British pilots, and Irish.

Miss W. S. Brown is said to be as skilful a pilot as any man or woman.

Their pictures are published to stimulate interest in flying.

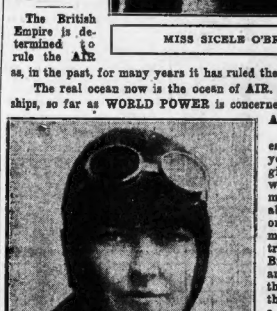
It would be worth while going up in the air to meet young people of this kind.

The faces are published, also, to show that our friends across the water produce girls that anybody might be proud to know.

MISS SICELE O'BRIEN

The British Empire is determined to rule the AIR as, in the past, for many years it has ruled the OCEAN.

The real ocean now is the ocean of AIR. And the real ships, so far as WORLD POWER is concerned, will be the AIRSHIPS.



MISS W. S. BROWN

It is not necessary to tell you that such girls as these will be the mothers of boys able to carry on, in the atmosphere, the traditions of British power and conquest in the lower ocean that is now only a well-traveled road of commerce.

Young ladies, consider the advantages of flying. Bear in mind that it is one thing in which you can equal or excel men. It requires courage, which you HAVE; good nerves, which you HAVE; ambition and imagination. You have them.

Get yourself a good airplane, a becoming flying suit, and, like these young British women, TAKE TO THE AIR.
